Kelley heard nothing

Washington (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley has disclosed that his top aides told him nothing when he complained to them privately that someone in the bureau was lying to him about FBI burglaries.

In a deposition made public Thursday, Kelley testified that he has never been told details of burglaries conducted by FBI agents after 1966 against persons thought to be involved with militant political groups.

He said he never sought such information either from his own staff or from Justice Department officials conducting a criminal investigation of the burglaries.

But Kelley disclosed for the first time that he discussed the matter in a private meeting of senior FBI officials and that none offered any information.

Tanks may mean prosperity

(c) New York Times

Strafford, Conn. — The Army's choice last week of Chrysler Corp. as the primary contractor for its proposed new generation of battle tanks may help fuel this hard-hit industrial state's economic recovery 18 to 24 months from now and may help assure relative prosperity for the state in the early 1980s.

That assessment was made by business leaders and state officials weighing the possible consequences of the Chrysler contract to build 11 prototype tanks. The tanks will use gas-turbine engines that are to be produced here by the Lycoming Division of the Avco Corp.

Ashtray eats smoke

Chicago (AP) — Norbert Kirk says he got the idea when he was sitting at a restaurant table and the smoke from cigarettes around him was making him sick. He invented a smoke-eater ashtray.

Kirk, president of a toy designing firm, came up with a portable ashtray small enough to be carried in a shirt pocket.

A tiny motorized fan run on batteries sucks up all the smoke and draws it into an air-deodorizing pad.

There also is a table model that can be plugged into the nearest available electrical outlet.

Hearst posts bail

Los Angeles (UPI) — Randolph Hearst posted $500,000 bail bond Thursday for his daughter Patricia on local felony charges, but her release from jail awaited similar action in a federal court in San Francisco.

Superior Court Judge William Ritz refused a motion by Hearst attorney Al Johnson to reduce the bail.

Johnson, Hearst and the judge conferred in chambers briefly before returning to the courtroom where the formal motion to reduce bail was offered and rejected.

Johnson then called Hearst forward and he signed a document assuring payment of $500,000.

Judge's removal asked

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP) — A hearing has been scheduled for Friday on a defense motion to remove Superior Court Judge Frederic Heineman from the John Harvey Adamson murder trial.

Presiding Judge Roger Broomfield issued an order Thursday that persons involved in the case be in his courtroom at 10 a.m.

Adamson, 32, faces trial Nov. 29 for the June 2 car-bomb slaying of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles. A mistrial was declared by Heineman Oct. 21, after three days of unsuccessful attempts to seat a jury.

Despite defense claims that massive publicity made selection of an unbiased jury impossible, Heineman denied motions by both the defense and the prosecution to move the trial to another county.

IH, UAW reach agreement

Chicago (UPI) — Negotiators working nonstop through the first hours of a strike reached tentative agreement Thursday on a new pact between the United Auto Workers and International Harvester.

The tentative agreement was announced shortly before 2 p.m., 14 hours after some 40,000 UAW workers went on strike at IH plants and installations in 11 states.

A company spokesman said the big farm implement and heavy truck manufacturing company hoped workers will return to their jobs by Monday after ratifying the agreement. Details of the settlement were not announced.

Negotiations began Wednesday morning, stretched through the 12:01 a.m. Thursday strike deadline and continued on until Thursday afternoon when the settlement was announced.

The strike against International Harvester was the second UAW walkout against a major farm implement company in two months.

"International Harvester and the United Auto Workers reached tentative agreement on a new three-year master contract," a joint statement said. "The agreement covers 40,500 hourly and salaried employees at 25 manufacturing plants, parts distribution centers and engineering facilities in 10 states."

"The policy committee of the union's harvester council met Thursday morning and after reviewing the results of a marathon bargaining session approved the tentative agreement and recommended its ratification to the 38 local unions covered by the master contracts," the statement said.

"A company spokesman noted that negotiators for both the union and the company had met during the day Wednesday and substantial progress had been made to warrant optimism about a settlement. However, because of the number of issues to be resolved, both parties agreed it was necessary and desirable to continue talks beyond the midnight deadline."

"While a schedule for ratification meetings is still being worked out by the union, the company expressed hopes that normal operations will resume Monday at each of its affected facilities."

Peaceful picketing had been reported at major plants in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee after the strike began at 12:01 a.m.

The old contract expired Oct. 1 but was extended until Thursday while the UAW settled its pact with Deere and Co., the "target" in negotiations in the farm equipment industry. Deere's 27,000 employees returned to work with a new contract Nov. 9 after a 39-day strike.

International Harvester employs 40,550 workers, including 16,493 at Illinois plants and installations in the greater Chicago area, Canton, Rock Island and East Moline. Other major plants are located in Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, Ind., Louisville, Ky., Memphis, Tenn., and Springfield, Ohio.

Smaller parts distribution centers and other facilities are in Atlanta, Shadyside, Ohio, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Kansas City, Kan., Columbus, Ohio, Dallas, Tex., and Phoenix, Ariz.

Liquor—maybe on Sunday?

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's historic ban on the Sunday sale of alcohol would be lifted under sweeping liquor policy changes hammered into final form Thursday.

That proposal from the City Council-appointed Liquor License Policy Review Committee is accompanied by recommendations to add 20 liquor licenses to the city's total and to permit liquor consumption in outdoor sidewalk cafes.

The ten-member committee has been working on the proposals in weekly meetings for the past 60 days. The committee plans one more meeting at noon Friday to check the final document and to apply signatures.

The document will then go to the City Council for action. The council appointed the committee because the existing liquor policies had become increasingly controversial.

There were complaints that liquor licenses were being sold for around $30,000 despite a state law making such transactions illegal and the State Liquor Control Commission had granted three liquor licenses despite recommendations of denial from the City Council.

The committee's specific recommendation on Sunday alcohol sales is that city policy follow state law.

State law allows the package sale of beer and wine all day, the on-premise sale and consumption of beer and wine after 1 p.m. and the on-premise sale and consumption of mixed drinks after 6 p.m. The package sale of hard liquor is not allowed.

The details of the committee's recommendation that the number of liquor licenses be expanded from the present 133 to 153 stipulate that the additions come in blocks of five per year for the next two years in two separate liquor license categories.

Those categories are Class C, which permits the package sale and on-premise sale and consumption of all types of liquor and Class A, which permits the sale of beer for consumption on-premise only.

During discussion Thursday night, attorney Paul Galtier noted that the recommendation to increase the number of liquor licenses allowed in the city will result in an "ungodly number of applicants."

The committee subsequently decided to suggest that the applicants not be approved on a first-come, first served basis, however.

Applicants who should be favored for licenses, the committee decided, would be new and novel businesses, with special consideration being given to restaurants.

Existing businesses who do not possess liquor licenses would therefore be handicapped under the committee's suggestion.

The committee is also recommending that the council refuse to allow the new licenses to be sold unless the buyer agrees to operate the existing business at the same location.

Another facet of the committee's report to the council is several recommendations that the city seek changes in state law.

On one point the committee recommends that the city work for local control of liquor licenses with state government allowed to overrule local government only when there is "gross abuse of discretion."

On another point, the committee recommends that the city work for creation of another category of liquor licenses that would be sold under the on-premise sale and consumption of alcohol only.

The proposals were approved with a striking lack of disagreement among the committee members.

Homebuilder faces antitrust count

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The State Justice Department charged the John L. Hoppe Lumber Co. Thursday with violating state antitrust laws by requiring purchasers of residential lots to buy building materials from the lumber company.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert Bartle filed the lawsuit in Lancaster District Court against the lumber firm and Briar West, Inc., Golf Park LTD. and Regency Estates. John L. Hoppe, a Lincoln homebuilder, is owner of the businesses.

Bartle contended that buyers of residential lots must agree to buy building materials from the lumber company provided the items carry competitive prices and are of comparable quality.

The state charged that practice violates the state's Consumer Protection Act and state antitrust laws.

Hoppe argued that the practice was not illegal, but has agreed to discontinue the practice, the lawsuit notes.

As a result, Bartle asked the district court to approve the compromise settlement.

Hoppe's attorney, Chauncy Barney, said, "We still don't feel it's a violation."

Barney said Hoppe believed purchasers of residential lots in the three subdivisions were getting a competitive break on the cost of building materials.

Bartle, chief of the antitrust division, said his office began an investigation into the matter when someone registered a complaint in September.

Many Thanksgiving food baskets unfilled

Visions of a stuffed turkey, and full stomachs, come Thanksgiving Day are getting dimmer for many Lincoln families.

As of late Thursday, only one-fourth of the requests for Thanksgiving food baskets had been filled by donors, according to Jane Finney, resource developer for the County Welfare Department's social services division.

With Thanksgiving less than a week away, 199 local families, both on and off welfare, have indicated they will need help putting food on their table for the all-American holiday.

To date, only 50 of those requests have been filled, Ms. Finney said.

"We need more donors," said Larry Milliken of the Lincoln-Lancaster United Way office which is serving as the clearing house for food basket donations.

People interested in donating Thanksgiving food baskets or cash may contact Milliken at the United Way office.

Agencies participating in the Thanksgiving food basket program are Capital Association for Retarded Citizens, the Indian Center, Malone Community Center, Head Start, Youth Service System, Lincoln Information Service for the Elderly, Veteran's Service Center, Lancaster County Welfare, Lancaster Child Care Center, Lincoln Action Program and Full Circle.

Another strike called by UAW

Detroit (UPI) — The United Auto Workers Union Friday called an unprecedented second auto industry strike this year — a selective 16 plant shutdown against General Motors Corp. after negotiators failed to reach agreement on a new national contract for 390,000 GM workers.

Just 69,000 of the giant auto firm's workers, 35,000 of them in Michigan, left their jobs in seven states at 12:01 a.m. Friday in a move that could have the same effect as closing all 119 GM plants in 21 states.

"The UAW-General Motors contract has expired," UAW President Leonard Woodcock and UAW Vice President Irving Bluestone said in a one paragraph statement handed out to newsmen.

"However, we are continuing to negotiate for a new national agreement and are hopeful this will be achieved," they said.

It was believed the union planned to use its "mini-strike" strategy in which workers would remain off the job for two or three days at a time. Company spokesmen said the shutdowns would force other assembly and manufacturing plants to begin closing "within days" if the workers don't return to their jobs by the middle of next week.

It was not known which of the union's key demands had posed the major stumbling block to settlement of the final "Big Three" labor pact. The union had been asking GM to match contracts already ratified at Ford and Chrysler, but also threw in a demand that the company agree not to interfere with union organizing drives in the South.

There was no immediate comment from GM negotiators who have been bargaining with the UAW since mid-July.

The strike action broke tradition, since the union has never bargained right up to its deadline and then just closed selected plants. The Ford Motor Co. was closed for 28 days in a national strike to set the pattern for the auto industry contracts covering 730,000 U.S. and Canadian auto workers.

The union abruptly changed its traditional pattern of all-or-nothing bargaining on Thursday afternoon, saying it would close just 16 plants — seven assembly and nine manufacturing facilities in seven states — in an obvious attempt to pressure the No. 1 auto firm into a settlement.

Workers began leaving their jobs even before the 12:01 a.m. Friday strike deadline arrived. Union leaders at the Cadillac assembly plant in Detroit and the Pontiac assembly plant in Pontiac, Mich., began moving through the plants late Thursday to tell their workers to leave the job.

"It's too late to stop us now," said Frank Runnels, president of UAW Local 22 at the Cadillac plant.

GM was last hit by a national strike in 1970 and was closed for 67 days before it finally agreed to a key union demand to resume unlimited cost-of-living allowances. It first used its "mini-strike" strategy in late 1972 to force the company to settle local in-plant issues.

The idea of the "mini-strike" is to disrupt production without paying striking workers benefits that would drain the UAW's strike fund, which stands at an estimated $150 million, at the rate of at least $20 million a week.

The workers left their jobs at seven assembly and manufacturing plants in Michigan, three in Ohio, two in Indiana and one each in New York, Georgia, Illinois and Wisconsin. More than half the workers were on strike in the seven Michigan plants, including the main assembly plants of the Oldsmobile and Cadillac divisions.

Any major production interruption at GM is unwelcome because the No. 1 company has just launched its new, smaller "full-sized" 1977 model cars. Its sales have been the one bright spot in the generally lackluster young 1977 model year that began in October. Its stock of the new full-sized models and even its hot-selling mid-sized cars is considered below normal because of strong sales.

Any strike action would have the severest effect in Michigan where the UAW represents 190,000 GM workers. Ohio is second with 78,000 GM workers, followed by Indiana with 42,500 workers and New York with 29,000.

Rules on students' hair may be discriminatory

Washington (UPI) — The government is trying to figure out whether schools can set different standards for the length of girls' and boys' hair without violating the law against discrimination because of sex.

Concern over the subject came to light in an Oct. 14 letter from Martin Gerry of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio. The letter was made available by HEW on request.

"While school districts may not prescribe hair length standards for one sex and not the other, the office for civil rights is currently considering whether the statute prohibits different hair length standards for boys and girls," Gerry told Taft.

A provision in the law generally prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in schools and school programs receiving federal funds. Taft had written to HEW on behalf of Perry local schools near Massillon, Ohio, after School Supt. Paul Pfeiffer said HEW officials in Chicago and Cleveland had threatened a cut off of federal aid because of the school system's dress code.

In his response, Gerry said the law makes it clear that a school district may not discriminate against any person in applying rules of appearance.

"Reasonable differences in clothing standards for males and females are permitted so long as the goals of such standards are the same — maintenance of order, modesty or cleanliness," wrote Gerry, director of HEW's office for civil rights.

He took the position that schools may prescribe non-discriminatory rules relating to beards and mustaches even though such rules would affect only male students.

But he said he is not certain about hair length limitations.

Intellectuals protest expulsion of balladeer

Berlin (AP) — Open dissidence has broken out in Communist East Germany at a level not seen since the tumult of the 1950s.

For the first time ever, a group of East German intellectuals has formally called on the government to reverse a headline position in expelling popular balladeer Wolf Biermann and revoking his East German citizenship.

The satirical ballads of Biermann, an avowed if unorthodox Communist, have long irked East German leaders.

The balladeer reached a peak of popularity in the 1960s with songs and poems praising socialism but condemning the East German form as Stalinist and an abuse of the people.

Some Western observers speculated the East German authorities were launching a new wave of repression against individual expression.

Biermann's expulsion follows a Protestant clergyman's burning himself to death in political protest last August and official actions against two writers in recent weeks. One was expelled from the country and the other from the East German Writers' Association.

A number of private citizens have openly expressed their desire to travel outside their walled-in state. Up to 20,000 persons are estimated to have officially requested permission to resettle in West Germany, and knowledgeable Western diplomats in Berlin claim 200,000 or more would leave if there were no restrictions.

The current wave of dissent is the strongest since a brief flareup in 1956, after the abortive Hungarian revolt of that year, which brought a major clampdown inside the Soviet-controlled part of Germany.

While Biermann, stranded in West Germany, pondered what to do next, a group of 13 other East German artists issued a public letter on his behalf Wednesday.

The signers said they did not endorse everything Biermann says or does, but the East German state should be able to put up with a poet who shares in a long literary tradition of being uncomfortable to his own time and place.

The letter quoted Karl Marx as saying, "The proletarian revolution must be able to criticize itself."

Biermann, 40 last Monday, appeared before 6,500 people last Saturday in Cologne, West Germany. The East German Communist party claimed his statements there caused the government to move against him, but in East Berlin, Robert Havemann, a Biermann confidant, said a Biermann church concert inside East Germany this fall was a more likely cause.

Biermann went to a church in the city of Prenzlau on invitation of the youth of the parish and performed there at a time when he was still banned from public appearances in East Germany.

The incident annoyed officials almost as much as the self-immolation in August of Pastor Oskar Brusewitz, which forced the church to reconsider its attempt at living side by side with a regime hostile to religious beliefs.

Havemann, a physicist and onetime professor at Humboldt University in East Berlin, said in an interview with West German radio that the letter of the 13 intellectuals supporting Biermann could be "of decisive importance."

It showed, he said, the regime had miscalculated the reaction of its own intellectual community.

Havemann called on French, Italian and

U.N. vote condemns Israel over U.S. protest

Nairobi, Kenya (AP) — Delegates at a U.N. conference voted Thursday to condemn Israel's policies in occupied Arab territories despite protests from the United States and other Western countries.

A commission of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) approved the Arab and African-backed resolution 73-6 with 30 abstentions, making adoption by the full conference certain.

The vote appeared certain to have unfavorable financial repercussions for UNESCO in the U.S. Congress.

The resolution calls Israeli cultural and educational policies in occupied areas "contrary to human rights and fundamental freedoms."

The commission also voted to send a fact-finding mission to the occupied territories next year.

Israel, the United States and other Western countries objected to the resolution's approval before any investigation was made.

"Why has it been thought necessary to criticize Israel before a single member of the fact-finding mission has stepped inside a single school?" U.S. delegation chairman Robert B. Kamm asked.

The head of the Israeli delegation, Prof. Shlomo Avineri, said after the vote, "It now appears the Arab countries are more interested in political condemnation than in the educational situation of the population in the territories."

Thursday's action came just one week after a U.N. Security Council vote branding as illegal and "an obstacle to peace" Israeli settlement in the occupied territories and any action "which tends to change the status of Jerusalem."

The UNESCO resolution specifically condemned Israel's "systematic cultural assimilation" of Arabs in the occupied territories. The Arabs claim the Israelis are trying to eliminate the culture of the Arabs in those lands through education and other means.

U.S. Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., who is here with the American delegation, said today's vote would make it far more difficult to persuade Congress to restore funds to UNESCO. The United States cut off its contributions after the body barred Israeli membership in 1974. American contributions made up 25 per cent of UNESCO's budget.

Quie said the vote could harden already strong support within Congress for the United States to withdraw entirely from UNESCO.

Britain offers Rhodesian conference deadline compromise

Geneva, Switzerland (UPI) — Britain offered a face-saving compromise to Black Nationalists Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe Thursday in an attempt to move talks forward on the formation of an interim government for Rhodesia.

In a proposal that met halfway the demands of hard-line Black Nationalists, British Conference Chairman Ivor Richard proposed a Dec. 20 deadline for conclusion of the Rhodesian peace conference. But he would not retract his refusal to set a date for the former British colony's independence.

Richard's one-page proposal to Nkomo and Mugabe repeated Britain's earlier pledge to try to complete the government transition by Dec. 1, 1977, or by March 1, 1978, at the latest, although neither date would be binding.

Richard said after a meeting with the "Patriotic Front" leaders, his suggestion was "designed to facilitate movement in the conference."

The two nationalists conferred privately on a joint response. Conference officials have not hidden their belief that Nkomo wants to get into the interim government discussions but has held back for fear of alienating Mugabe, who represents the guerrilla movement.

China's nuclear fallout cloud headed for Pacific Northwest

Washington (UPI) — The fallout cloud from China's nuclear blast Wednesday morning will begin arriving over the Pacific Northwest Saturday evening, the Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday.

"At this time it is not possible to predict the exact levels of radioactivity that might occur in the United States," the agency said. "However, the usual case would be that the material would be largely confined to the upper atmosphere and ground-level exposures would be quite low."

"There is the possibility that turbulent low pressure systems and subsequent rain might bring the material to earth which would be significant through the pasture-cow-milk pathway to man."

Heavy rainfall after the last Chinese blast Sept. 26 resulted in detectable fallout levels on the ground in Pennsylvania and other Eastern states.

Wednesday's four-megaton blast was 20 times more powerful than the last one.

EPA said it has activated its 67 monitoring stations and has been notified by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration that the "leading edge of the air mass containing radioactive debris will enter the United States over the Northwestern portion of Washington State on Nov. 20, at 6 p.m. CST."

Russians bar envoy's return

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union has barred the U.S. Embassy's top-ranking political officer from returning to Moscow, apparently as a reprisal for the United States' similar action against a Russian envoy to the United Nations, an embassy spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said the Soviet Foreign Ministry had withdrawn its entry visa for Marshall Brement, a career diplomat and the embassy's political counselor.

No official reason was given.

"This is clear retaliation for similar action taken by the U.S. against a Soviet diplomat assigned to the U.S. some weeks earlier," the spokesman said.

What 'traditions' Burns had in mind are still a mystery

By Leonard Silk

(c) New York Times

New York — One of the mysteries of the moment is what Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has in mind when he told the Senate Banking Committee last week that "traditional policies of economic stimulation might well be counterproductive." He subsequently let it be known through a Fed spokesman that he had intended only to warn Congress against too much spending, not to warn the Carter administration against cutting taxes.

"Traditional" policies of economic stimulation have generally been considered to include both tax cuts and expenditure increases.

Unraveling the mystery involves an examination of some of the fundamental issues troubling economists today — as well as some speculation on the politics of economic policy-making.

Burns' general statement raising doubts about the efficacy of traditional policies for stimulus reflects his view, in his statement to the Senate Banking Committee, that "in today's environment of deeply ingrained inflationary expectations," the Keynesian medicine of increasing total demand no longer can be relied on to cure unemployment.

The Fed chairman contended that such stimulus — applied successfully in many countries during the postwar periods of slump or inadequate expansion — now might cause "fears of inflation" to intensify, and "the seeds of another recession" to be sown.

Yet, those who have known Burns for a long time insist that he is not a dogmatic anti-Keynesian. In his view, the Western industrial democracies lived in a world for the first couple of decades after World War II in which the now-classical Keynesian economic policies worked well.

When recessions came, and taxes were cut or expenditures increased — whether by the discretionary policies of Whipple and Congress, or by the "built-in stabilizers" in the tax system and federal budget — the economy recovered without an early upsurge of inflation, and unemployment shrank.

But now, as Burns sees it, the price level keeps rising in good times and bad; unemployment and inflation are experienced together.

In that situation, simplistic Keynesianism is paralyzed. Total demand can be increased to fight unemployment, or reduced to fight inflation; but total demand can't be simultaneously decreased to fight both unemployment and inflation.

This is a crucial theoretical box from which both Keynesians and non-Keynesians are trying to escape. Walter Eltis, a fellow of Exeter College, Oxford, writing in the current Lloyd's Bank Review, hails Lord Keynes' "General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money" as one of the three truly great books that political economists have written — the other two being Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations" and Karl Marx's "Das Kapital."

Eltis says that it would be widely agreed that Keynes' work made "a significant contribution to human welfare in the quarter-century after its publication" — in 1936.

But, like Arthur Burns, Eltis thinks the world environment has changed with the acceleration of inflation. And, he maintains, "it must be particularly disturbing to Keynesian policymakers that the countries where their influence was greatest are those which have suffered most."

These countries, and Britain and Italy can be singled out, have suffered from faster inflation, slower growth, larger budget deficits and severe international currency collapses than their principal competitors where out-of-date pre-Keynesian methods of thought are still influential.

The countries he had in mind were presumably those, such as West Germany, Switzerland and Japan, where economic policies are more orthodox, old-fashioned thrift and high savings (and investment) are practiced, and inflation and budget deficits are most feared. Indeed, this is the empirical foundation for renewed belief among many conservatives in "the old-time religion" of fiscal and monetary restraint and less government activity to fight the business cycle.

The neo-Keynesian economists — and they are the principal advisers who worked with Carter through the campaign and are now working on post-inauguration economic and budget policy — are not convinced by this neo-conservatism which implies that "Keynes is dead."

"If there is any lesson of the last decade," says Arthur M. Okun of the Brookings Institution, who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Johnson, "it is not that Keynesian policies don't work, but that they work too well."

By this, Okun means that increasing aggregate demand (by cutting taxes or increasing spending) does make the economy run faster, and doing the reverse does slow it down. But the real problem, he says, has been "not knowing when to stop."

He finds no shred of evidence, in empirical data or in the professional literature, to suggest that in Western industrial countries the effect of changes in fiscal and monetary policy is "less prompt, less reliable, or of lesser size than we would have had 10 or 15 years ago." Okun, who serves as a consultant to the Federal Reserve Board now, asserts that the Fed itself has no memoranda or studies that prove the contrary.

Third quarter 3.8% growth could raise unemployment

Washington (UPI) — The Commerce Department Thursday trimmed its pre-election assessment of third-quarter economic growth of 3.8% — too slow to stave off further increases in unemployment already at the 7.6-million level.

Two weeks before the presidential election, the department said the real gross national product increases 4% between July and September — the exact pace needed to prevent further joblessness.

In a reassessment based on more complete data, the department said the growth rate was slightly lower because of reduced consumer spending and increased imports.

It estimated, after eliminating the effects of inflation, that the GNP increased by $11.7 billion from the second quarter to a $1.271 trillion total in the third. This was $1.3 billion below the pre-election assessment.

In other economic developments:

— Two prominent economists at the University of Michigan said economic growth will be sluggish in 1977 even with a $13 billion tax cut. Prof. Saul Hymans and Harold Shapiro forecast a growth rate in real GNP of 4.3% if taxes are reduced.

— Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns said he could "see no advantage in a tax cut at the present time." But Burns said he was open to change if economic conditions weakened.

— Corporate profits from current production increased 4.8%, or $5.6 billion to $122 billion in the third quarter. The growth in profits accelerated from the 1.1% increase in the second quarter, but remained unsatisfactorily low, according to Richard Leshner, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The third-quarter increase in GNP compared with a growth rate of 4.5% in the second quarter and, as earlier indicated, was the lowest since the recession ended in the winter of 1975.

The slippage in the revised report demonstrated in the broadest economic terms why unemployment rose in the third quarter although the economy appeared to be on a steady course. A drop below a 4% meant a slowing in production and consumption.

The Commerce Department said investment in homes, apartments and business plant and equipment increased $800 million. There was a $700 million increase in inventories — sale-ready goods on shelves and in warehouses — apparently because of weaker sales activity.

The downward revision in GNP was the second major negative change in federal economic reports since the election. The other was in industrial production.

The report also said the federal deficit rose again in the third quarter to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $57.1 billion — $3 billion higher than the second quarter.

Solar industry has its 'snake-oil salesmen'

Chicago (AP) — Buyers of solar heating equipment can be burnt.

The new industry has its share of "snake-oil salesmen" and produces everything from "well-engineered systems right down to junk," an energy specialist said Thursday.

There is a need for government standards before new buyers get hurt or the industry itself "gets a black eye," hurting future development, said William Graves of Brookhaven Laboratories in Upton, N.Y.

Graves was among several energy specialists at a three-day exposition attended by about 20,000 members of the building industry.

Gregory Hurt of the Energy Research and Development Administration estimated there are more than 500 manufacturers of solar equipment, including some who are willing to "sell you the moon."

More than half of the 56 energy-related exhibits at the exposition feature solar energy products or systems.

"My comments don't apply to what I've seen at this show," said Graves in an interview. "But I've been at other solar exhibits where the equipment has run the gamut from well-engineered systems right down to junk."

Technology is sufficient, Graves and others said, for solar heating and domestic hot water systems but prospective buyers should look close at the cost benefits they expect to receive.

At current prices, solar heating may not be economically feasible.

A solar space heating system for a three-bedroom home may cost $7,000, Graves said. If it is financed through a 20-year home mortgage, principal and interest rates may work out for the solar plant to $63 a month, Graves said.

"Unless you save that much in electricity and fuel, you haven't made anything off it," said Graves. "And any system would still have to be supplemented with more conventional fuels."

The new homebuilder, more than the commercial or industrial buyer, particularly would be vulnerable to high-pressure tactics or prone to buy inferior equipment, Graves said.

Graves said most homeowners would deal only with salesmen, and probably the salesman for the distributor, not the manufacturer.

"These people (the salesmen) are going to be under a lot of price pressure trying to be competitive and there will be a real driving force to get it in cheap, get it in quick and get out," Graves said.

More than half surveyed for spray ban, or have cut use

Washington (UPI) — More than half of those contacted in a 37-state survey either support a ban on fluorocarbon aerosol sprays or have reduced their own use of them, it was reported Thursday.

Nearly 40% of those who have curtailed personal aerosol use said they did so because of the controversy over whether fluorocarbons are destroying the ozone layer or causing other environmental damage.

Dr. Walter De Vries, who conducted the poll for the consumer product safety commission, said "frankly, the results surprised me." He said that in a survey two years ago, almost no one expressed concern about the problem.

He also said there is a remarkably high degree of public knowledge on the subject — with most consumers forming their attitudes on the basis of newspaper accounts rather than radio or television.

Consumers, he told a news conference, "have thought it through and have thought it through for quite a while. Their attitudes and opinions on this subject are precise."

The commission meanwhile discussed at its executive session Thursday a petition from the Natural Resources Defense Council for a ban on aerosols with fluorocarbons. It was learned, however, that the commissioners did not reach a decision and no action was taken.

Under law, the agency has until Nov. 26 to respond to the petition. While no further executive sessions were scheduled, it was possible the commission could meet again on the subject at any time.

Barbara Franklin, a commission member, said the time has come to begin restricting fluorocarbon use because it appears "the odds are against an ultimate finding favorable to fluorocarbons."

The telephone poll contacted 1,801 persons late last month and early this month. The commission ordered the survey because it must decide whether to restrict the use of fluorocarbons in products under its jurisdiction, such as household cleaners.

Eighty per cent bulk of aerosol-fluorocarbon products already are on their way out because the Food and Drug Administration has decided to phase out use of the gas in products it controls.

The survey featured a question noting the controversy over the ozone layer — which shields the Earth from dangerous levels of radiation from the sun — and asking what should be done.

On that, 61.9% said aerosols with fluorocarbons should be taken off the market. Another 27.4% suggested labeling to point out the presence of fluorocarbons, while 8.1% recommended no action and another 2.6% were unsure what to do. Consumers also were asked whether they had stopped using any household products because of reports concerning fluorocarbons. On that question, 44.9% answered yes, 50.4% said no and 4.7% were unsure.

Spain records trade imbalance

Madrid (AP) — Spain's foreign trade showed a deficit of $7.2 billion in the first 10 months of this year, the Spanish directorate general of customs reported.

The report said that in the January-October period the Spanish imports amounted to $13.8 billion while exports totaled $6.6 billion.

Hands-off policy wise before inauguration

An appealing issue

One of Congressman-elect John Cavanaugh's interests as a one-term Nebraska legislator was in ventilating government; in trying to help people understand what forces are brought to bear in the decision-making process. This he sought to do with such devices as stricter provisions covering lobbyist activity. Cavanaugh was not altogether successful in his endeavors, but he kept trying.

In campaigning for the Second District House of Representatives seat vacated by John Y. McCollister, Cavanaugh picked up on that earlier theme.

The Omaha Democrat said over and over again in his campaign against Republican Lee Terry that one of the major issues facing a member of Congress is the necessity to restore people's trust in that institution and the people who are elected to it. Reforms of Congress are top priority items for Cavanaugh.

We got the impression that Terry and some of his supporters were somehow not taking Cavanaugh seriously on that score.

But Cavanaugh must have struck a responsive chord among the voters. He won a resounding victory, a landslide, really, after pulling from behind in the opinion polls.

His attention given to peoples' negative feelings toward government was not misspent.

A Louis Harris survey taken recently showed that the top priority for the next Congress in the minds of most people is to "clean up the corruption in government." Also high on the priority list for Congress is "make sure no more Watergate affairs can take place."

The Watergate scandals and the congressional sex-and-payroll scandals and abuse-of-station incidents are still matters of concern to people.

It is little wonder that a strong emphasis on making Congress a more open, clean and responsive body would have appeal.

The prize cost less

The cost figures on Jimmy Carter's campaign for the presidency show that charity begins at home and that it doesn't take a Nixon-sized boodle to win.

Carter spent some $13 million during 19 months of campaigning to win the Democratic nomination. His fellow Georgians contributed more than 20% of that amount, an impressive percentage, and some of the money from home came when it was most needed: when the Supreme Court forced the Federal Election Commission to suspend disbursement of federal matching funds for three months in the spring. That ruling temporarily jeopardized the campaign efforts of all active candidates. During that period, in April, Georgians alone contributed over a quarter of a million dollars to help Carter win the Pennsylvania primary and firmly establish himself as frontrunner.

Adding up the cost of winning the nomination and the money spent on the general election campaign against President Ford, Carter spent almost $35 million in his successful White House bid. A little over $25 million came from federal funds. The figures for President Ford are probably somewhere in the same ballpark.

But worth noting is the comparison between what it took Carter to win and what former President Nixon lavishly spent in the plots and intrigues which attended his walkaway from George McGovern in 1972. Nixon spent a total of $62 million that year, almost twice that spent by Carter. And Carter spent $7 million less than the amount George McGovern spent in losing all but one state in his frustrating effort against Nixon.

The new federal election financing laws may need some revising, but in our opinion the thrust is good and healthy. Too much money causes worse problems than too little money, if recent history is any guide.

And as far as peoples' nerves are concerned, the candidates this year spent half as much as four years ago and still managed to drive people up the wall before election day.

Change in budget ranks

After 16 years as chairman of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee, State Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings has decided to try for another leadership post. He has announced his candidacy for chairman of the Legislative Council's executive board.

After so many years of being the Legislature's budget czar and seeing his grip over the panel slowly loosen in the last few years, perhaps even Marvel would agree that in this important area chairmen should not remain entrenched for such an extended period. The change should be good for both Marvel and the Legislature.

And in saying this we are in no way trying to diminish the widespread respect for Marvel's ability as a senator and the power he wielded as budget panel chief.

The contest among senators seeking to succeed Marvel as Appropriations chairman has immensely important implications for the state. Hopefully the next chairman will have a balanced, statewide view of spending needs.

And the next chairman might also, as much as humanly possible, attempt to keep the committee on schedule so that budget bills are reported out for floor action in time for proper consideration.

Washington — Two months before he becomes president, Jimmy Carter is being importuned to play a quasi-official role on this issue and that. The British want him in on plans for support of the pound. The State Department would like him to send a tough private message to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries warning against an oil price increase.

It is natural that people concerned with particular problems should want to involve the man who before long will make the decisions, and it is tempting for him. But Carter has so far wisely resisted temptation. On the critical oil issue he has confined himself to expressing, as a person with "no responsibility in the government," the "hope" that prices will not rise.

Keeping hands off is wise for reasons of both politics and policy, as the oil case shows. If Carter began working with State now, he would be in a situation that he could not control. If the intervention with OPEC were ineffectual, as the odds indicate, his political image — and potential for influence in the world — would have been damaged.

Franklin Roosevelt was pressed to act under even more urgent circumstances, the economic crisis of 1932-33. Arthur Schlesinger tells the story well in "The Age of Roosevelt." President Hoover asked the President-elect to the White House to discuss joint action, then wrote him a long letter urging it, finally telephoned him twice the night before the inauguration. Roosevelt resolutely refused to become involved. Roosevelt and his aides perceived a danger beyond that of taking political responsibility without power. Agreement with Hoover could have been achieved only by accepting many of his premises — and thus tying the new administration to failed policies.

That danger is acute in the oil price situation now. If Carter took part in a diplomatic demarche, he would effectively be adopting as his own a policy that has been one of the certified disasters of the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Henry Kissinger has approached oil prices as a problem in international relations to be handled by his usual methods of diplomatic leverage. For example, he has encouraged Iran to become an enormous buyer of American arms, apparently hoping that the close relationship would among other things make Iran reasonable on oil prices. But the Shah, hungry for more money to finance his ambitions, has led the fight within OPEC for higher prices.

Anyone who wants to know why oil prices are likely to rise should look at the record not of U.S. diplomacy but of U.S. oil imports. Four years ago we were importing 29% of our oil; now the figure is 41%. In the same period OPEC's share of the American market has nearly doubled, from 18 to 34%. The simplest notion of market economics would encourage a supplier to raise prices under such circumstances.

The United States, as by far the largest consumer of oil, is more likely to affect world prices by its behavior at home than by its representations abroad.

At the time of the Arab embargo four years ago, there was a lot of official talk about energy policy. Richard Nixon emphasized quick development of new domestic oil sources and said his Project Independence would make us self-reliant in energy in 1980. William E. Simon said Americans would have to give up their "wastrel ways" with energy and "go through a permanent change in lifestyle." But it was mostly just talk.

By now we know that domestic sources can never supply the volume of oil we are used to consuming. And on energy conservation the American record has been feeble.

The United States should be the West's leader on energy policy, but it is the laggard. Western Europe and Japan have been cutting the amount of energy used per unit of Gross National Product — Britain by 8% in two years, for example — but there has been no reduction here. America has not yet put a single barrel of oil in emergency reserves.

The single greatest encouragement to continued high oil consumption here has been the artificially low price of gasoline. In constant dollars, discounting inflation, it actually costs a little less in the U.S. now than it did in the 1950's. The price is half what it is in Western Europe.

The problems are hard. But some American administration would have had to face them some day, whether OPEC existed or not. Industry and outside estimates on the time until the world's oil runs out range from 25 to 50 years. The sooner we get serious about the fact that the supply is limited, the less traumatic will be the inevitable transition to other fuels and other social arrangements.

Blue jeans belong in the Rose Garden

Boston — Several years ago my uncle ran for town meeting member in an all-out effort to become one of a hundred citizens with the power to decide where the stop signs should be placed in our town. He says he smelled victory on election eve when he saw "the Secret Service surrounding the house."

No, the office never exactly went to his head.

Jimmy Carter, I suspect, knew that he'd won, really won, when the reporters began calling him "Sir." The very morning after the night before, the process of being "presidentialized" had begun and he wanted to answer some questions about whether it would go to his head.

Just as he was being draped in the emperor's new clothes — a nice purple toga of pomp and circumstance, power and respect — the man from Georgia insisted that he wanted to eliminate some of the aspects of what he called "the imperial presidency."

He talked about opening the White House to public receptions, and the inauguration to democracy. But it isn't the house that has gotten out of contact with public lives, it's the presidents themselves.

The ascension to the presidency removes a citizen from the ordinary hassles of life, like getting an inspection sticker for his car. If Carter really wants to de-imperialize the presidency he should keep in mind an old Chinese proverb: In the land of self-service, the emperor is someone who doesn't put his own dish in the sink.

Ford, after all, entered his term with a reputation for toasting his own English muffins and ended it by talking about himself in the third person. Carter began by carrying his own wardrobe bag over his shoulder, but he, too, can be trapped in the trappings of the office.

For the next four years Carter will be free from worrying about whether he has matching socks in the drawer. He will not have to put a light bulb in a lamp, or stand in a line, or wait for a delivery, or balance a checkbook.

Ellen Goodman

Presidents, if I may misquote F. Scott Fitzgerald, are different from the rest of us who put Drano in the sink and freak out when the furnace blows.

Presidents can get a plumber on Sunday.

In general, the idea behind serving the president is that the chief of state should be free from the nitty-gritty hum-drum-a-day stuff, such as worrying if the car will start. They should be free to contemplate nuclear disaster and unemployment.

But a guy who describes himself as a populist should know that the little questions are often the real questions, and freedom from them is distance from us.

It won't be easy to be a citizen president without being self-conscious or silly about it. I don't expect Carter to change the oil in his car.

But he should keep the wardrobe bag over his shoulder, whether it's in Plains or Peking. He should break the baton of the bandleader who strikes up "Hail to the Chief" every time he comes to dinner, and he should wear his jeans in the Rose Garden.

A populist president ought to have wash-and-wear sheets and the "exact change" in his pocket. He should buy coffee in the supermarket once a month, check the White House fuel bill in January, pick up the newspaper at the drugstore on Sunday and his daughter at school on Friday.

Furthermore, once each term he should be required to fill out an insurance form, book a commercial flight, ride on a bus, and try to renew his passport at the local office without his birth certificate.

He should, in short, have some ordinary tasks to keep him a man of the people, a frustrated consumer, a citizen of the bureaucracy susceptible to getting his car towed.

He might even follow the lead of my ever-humble uncle, who, for the entire term of office as town-meeting member, never once thought it beneath him to take out the garbage.

In defense of Tom

Lincoln, Neb.

As usual after all Husker losses or ties, I've heard nothing but grumbling, griping, and of course the continuing demands to "can Osborne." This is the fourth year of it and it's getting nauseating, to say the least.

Where were all these "experts" when Bob D. went six and four during both the 1967 and 1968 seasons? For one thing, we hadn't at that time become quite so accustomed to excellence, since it didn't arrive until 1962. Also, the two national championships hadn't even further distorted our values — although NO ONE would like to see us Number One better than I.

Nebraska fans often forget that frequently, when there's a change of the guard, many dynasties either crumble or at least have a few sub-par years before rebounding. It happened at Missouri, it happened at Oklahoma. To jog a few memories, Nebraska was 9-2-1 in Bob's last season, and 9-2-1 in Tom's first year. Yes, the dynasty did and does survive.

So — Tom's not a chair-throwing Woody Hayes. Thank goodness. "Nice guys finish last" was originally leveled by Leo Durocher at Mel Ott, the likable New York Giant superstar-manager. It has been disproven time and time again by many fine athletes on and off the field. Anyone who assumes that because a jack or a coach can't get the adrenalin flowing fast enough because he's a dedicated Christian man should look at the examples set by Tom Landry, Elvin Hayes, Brooks Robinson, Jeff Kinney, John Wooden, Monte Johnson and Steve Davis. God bless ya, Tom, and keep up the good work!

ting to get involved with society's problems and that all they think about is themselves. This is not so.

On November 9 I took my son out for a walk. I was walking and he was riding his "big wheel," and I tried to keep him in sight. All at once, I was down, and a young man appeared as if from nowhere. He offered to get me an ambulance, but I knew I was not seriously injured and had to find my six-year-old. Another young man driving a light blue sedan stopped in the middle of North 25th Street and came over to see if I needed an ambulance. I told him I had to find my son and he asked his name, told me to stay there and that he would find him. Soon he brought the little boy back to me. I thanked him but did not get his name nor license number. I am including my address in this letter, hoping he will see it and contact me so I may thank him properly.

I don't ever again want to hear anyone making general statements about men with long hair, beards and mustaches. Some of them are protectors and do not want to conform to society, but this young man certainly had been brought up right, because he did everything he possibly could for my son and me. He offered us a ride home, but I needed to walk to keep my injured knee from becoming stiff.

The young man opened my eyes to the fact that there is good in his generation, too.

Regarding the Lincoln chiropractor who was charged with manslaughter for causing the death of a patient, this is absurd. The statements given in the newspaper showed clearly that Mr. Lahners is ignorant about chiropractic, which is really what is on trial here and not Bill Seng.

Illness of spirit

Lincoln, Neb.

As a descendant of a number of war-like Scots, several clans famed for fighting, I must deplore their zeal and myopia. To me, the better part of valor is wisdom. Discretion is not cowardice but courage, when truth shows that war is a game that should long since have been cast aside in favor of human progress.

Atavism is useless and worse in today's world. When one stands in Edinburgh's Memorial to the War Dead and sees the roster of names, it is as if we had slain these men for our advantage. How did their deaths benefit us? Not really.

Now the U.S. national debt is more than $700 billion. In 1932, the debt was $4 billion while some people argued that if the Work Progress Administration were to hire the unemployed of that time, our country would have a $12 billion debt and would consequently be bankrupt.

Militarism is a cancer on the people of the world. Until this illness of our spirit is cured, there is nothing but woe ahead.

Peace to all!

By Jan Gauger

Chairman

Robert E. Colin, Sr.
Lancaster County Board of Equalization

During the past several years, the Lancaster County Board has explored every avenue to constructively deal with the problem of updating property evaluations for Lancaster County. Because of the concerns expressed recently by the president of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, as well as members of the Lincoln Alliance, we feel that some chronology of the efforts made by the Lancaster County Board is in order.

During the 1974-75 County Budget hearings, the Lancaster County assessor requested $80,000 be placed in his budget for the purpose of implementing a new system to reassess all property values in Lancaster County. A refusal on the part of the assessor to adequately explain this new "multiple regression" system to the County Board prompted the County Board to seek advice from the state tax commissioner's office.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters in his explanation of multiple regression, advised the County Board this system should not be used to reassess property values, but could best be used to update property values using a current appraisal. Peters then reminded the County Board that the last appraisal made in Lancaster County was completed in 1969 and, in his opinion, was one of the worst appraisals he had ever seen. Peters also told the County Board his office would question using multiple regression as a tool to update values with the 1969 appraisal as a base. He advocated as an alternative, a new county-wide appraisal performed co-operatively by his office and the county assessor's office, after which a multiple regression program could be utilized to annually update and maintain a proper level of values.

State Tax Commissioner Peters also informed the County Board his office was deeply concerned with the procedures being used at that time by the county assessor. Peters said his office had documented proof that the assessor, in his attempt to keep the sales and assessment ratio in balance as required by state law, was lowering the figures on the real estate sales records sent to the state tax commissioner's office. Real estate sales records are used to compare actual property values with assessments on the tax rolls by the state tax commissioner's office.

Peters told the County Board his office intended to take steps which would assure a correction of these unethical if not actually illegal practices, and advised the County Board not to give the assessor the $80,000 he requested to implement the multiple regression system using the obsolete 1969 appraisal.

Realizing the seriousness of the allegations made by Peters with reference to the operations of the assessor's office, the County Board decided to place the $80,000 requested by the assessor in the General Fund Miscellaneous Account rather than the County Assessor's budget. The County Board requested that the assessor work with the state tax commissioner's office in developing a new appraisal system and that the money he requested would be available. Meyer refused to co-operate with the tax commissioner's office and the new system proposed by the assessor was not implemented during the 1974-75 budget year.

During the balance of the 1974-75 budget year, and the early part of the 1975-76 budget year, the County Board made several contacts with State Tax Commissioner Peters asking what actions his office was going to take in regard to the incorrect procedures being used by the county assessor. In each case, the County Board received the same standard answer from Peters, "We are still working on the problem."

The County Board, being thoroughly convinced they were receiving the well-known run-around, made contact with Governor: Exon in March of 1974, asking for his help. The result of this request was negative.

During the 1975-76 county budget hearings, the assessor again requested $70,000 in his budget for the same multiple regression program. Once again the County Board met with State Tax Commissioner Peters. Peters advised the County Board to budget the money requested, and let the assessor's office bear the responsibility for the new system.

The County Board told Peters they were not willing to give the assessor $70,000.00 to spend on a program that Peters earlier had said he might not approve, and asked Peters why he had changed his mind. Peters advised the County Board that it was apparent that the assessor did not wish to work with his office, and without the money requested would do nothing to correct the assessment inequity present in Lancaster County.

Peters again assured the County Board his office had completed compiling the necessary data covering the operations used by the county assessor and that some action would be taken soon.

Following the advice of State Tax Commissioner Peters, the County Board placed the $70,000.00 in the county assessor's budget.

During the recent 1976-77 county budget hearings, the assessor requested an additional $30,000.00 to complete his multiple regression program. When the County Board asked what percentage of the program was completed and when the balance would be completed, the assessor refused to give this information to the County Board, saying he would make no promises.

Being deeply concerned, the County Board proceeded to place $15,000 in the revenue-sharing budget, thus earmarking this money for the specific purpose of completing the new program. The assessor informed the County Board that unless the money requested was put in his budget, allowing him to spend it as he saw fit, he wanted no part of it.

During the 1973 Lancaster County Board of Equalization hearings, the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Company in their testimony informed the County Board they had employed the services of an independent local tax consultant, Mr. Fred Herrington, to make a study of procedures used by the county assessor's office with reference to the updating of values on property involved in sales of real estate in Lancaster County.

The County Board arranged a meeting with Mr. Fred Herrington, the tax consultant for Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Company and County Attorney Ron Lahners with the thought in mind that Herrington would present the results of his study to the county attorney. The outcome of this meeting was negative. The county attorney informed the County Board that Mr. Herrington did not have LT&T's permission to give him any information regarding the study made of the county assessor's Office.

On September 27, 1976, at the request of the County Board, a meeting was held with an official from the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Company, County Attorney Ron Lahners and the County Board. During that meeting, a copy of the LT&T study was given to the county attorney for his review. Lahners advised the County Board he would review the LT&T study and would report back to the County Board.

On October 19, 1976, the County Board received a memorandum from County Attorney Lahners, regarding the changing of figures on the real estate transactions statements made by the county assessor's office. In his memorandum Lahners advised the County Board he had discussed the matter with State Tax Commissioner Peters and Peters agreed with Lahners that there was no violation of any statute or regulation with regard to the duties of the county assessor.

The Lancaster County board has apparently exhausted its resources for help from both state and county government officials in its unsuccessful attempts to correct the problems. The County Board will continue to work with all offices involved and will continue to fund the updating of property values.

We have not asked Commissioner Bruce Hamilton to sign this article since many of the events pre-date his taking of office. He does concur with the events described which occurred during his term of office.

Fired penal officer denies charge
Associated Press
Former penitentiary correctional officer John Hawkins told the state Personnel Board Thursday that accusations causing him to be shifted to a tower guard post and later discharged, "were not true."

He said those charges involved homosexual or unnatural sex acts and introduction of marijuana into the Penal Complex. On questioning by his attorney, Hawkins denied both.

Hawkins was the first person to take the stand in his appeal from discharge from penitentiary employment last April. He told of his work a dispute with senior correctional specialist Albert Nance over kitchen work, and later charges against himself.

In appealing the case his attorney, Merritt James, said Hawkins had not committed wrongful acts and was improperly discharged.

Hawkins testified that he had had no problems at the complex until his disagreement with Nance.

He said he had been a utility officer assigned to the kitchen until transfer to tower position, which he said took place pending investigation of charges against him.

He then filed suit in Lancaster County District Court, objecting to his "demotion" and following that said he was suspended and discharged.

The hearing was expected to be lengthy. According to Personnel Board procedure, the side with the grievance presents testimony first, with the employer then replying.

Personnel Board members are: David Flebbe, chairman, Omaha; Richard Person, vice chairman, Holdrege; Bruce Peters, Fremont and Herman Brockmeier, Lincoln.

Hospital visit not so painful
Donald Cook, RR 1, Raymond, has found out that going to the hospital is not all pain.

UNL sex bias study yields no findings yet

Associated Press
Martin Munn, new Affirmative Action officer for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says he has received no indication from a Department of Health, Education and Welfare team about their findings during an on-site inspection of sex discrimination charges at UNL.

"It's kind of like an Internal Revenue Service audit," Munn said of the investigation of tenure, hiring and pay practices. A similar check from the Kansas City HEW regional office was conducted last week at the University of Nebraska-Omaha.

UNL Minority Affairs Director Jimmy Smith said his office is taking a "wait and see" attitude toward Munn, who began only two and a half weeks ago.

Munn said he did not know when results might come to Chancellor Roy Young or others. Such procedures take time, said Munn, who has been through federal discrimination compliance reviews at other institutions.

Munn said the investigation which stemmed from a 1974 complaint did not surprise him because, "any entity as large as the university which receives a large amount of federal money is subject to scrutiny."

The university is acting to erase sex discrimination and other forms of prejudice, he said, citing his hiring as one example.

Chancellor Young is concerned about hiring and pay practices, Munn said. Reports nationally indicate women faculty are paid less than men despite improvements in recent years. Pay and hiring practices are two areas the compliance team is checking, Munn said.

HEW staffers Russell Bailey and John Thurnham have met with several university officials are scheduled to return through Friday. Munn said the two may return later this month.

Smith said Munn was "extremely forceful" when he appeared before the UNL Student Affairs staff. Smith said Munn will do well if his actions back his words.

Munn is a Des Moines native and had been assistant to the president at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash. A newsman and public relations man for about 25 years, he was once athletic ticket manager for Washington State University at Pullman.

"I'm the first to recognize we need more minorities," he said, "but they're not just waiting out there to be hired. How many black Ph.D.s are there in journalism, for example?" Minority hiring has become increasingly competitive, he suggested.

Munn told the minority affairs staff that his knowledge and experience outweighed the fact the was not a woman or from an ethnic minority. Smith said.

Smith said an Affirmative Action officer should be able to "feel the emotion and gut issues," rather than "get bogged down" in reports and statistics.

Girl Scout council asks more funds

By Linda Olig
Star Staff Writer

The Homestead Girl Scout Council made its final appeal Thursday for an increased 1977 United Way allocation.

Girl Scout representatives addressed the Lincoln-Lancaster County United Way board and painstakingly explained sheet after sheet of figures to substantiate their plea for an additional $21,000 during the next calendar year.

The council, representing 13 Southeast Nebraska counties, wanted $45,000 from Lancaster County; the budget team and agency relations division recommended $18,000.

Since then, the council has instituted a cost-accounting system to determine what is spent in each of the 13 southeast

Nebraska counties it serves. According to Girl Scout Council president Anabeth Frazier, 54% of the council's income is from Lancaster County; 64.8% of the money is spent in the county.

"This lets us know where to cut back on services where we do not get the support we need," Mrs. Frazier warned.

The appeal, along with the new facts and figures, was referred to United Way's agency relations division, chaired by Glen Smith.

Final determination on the appeal will be made at the United Way's Dec. 16 meeting. At that time, the agency relations division will announce its final 1977 recommendation for all 25 United Way agencies.

In other action, the board approved the Girl Scouts' 1977 cookie sale which is expected to produce $62,000 for the council; that amount has already been budgeted. Orders for cookies will be taken Jan. 21-31; the cookies will be delivered March 4-14.

United Way president Ken Witt also announced that the executive committee had allowed the Girl Scout council a $700 advance against its planned sustaining membership campaign to purchase a typewriter.

In other action, Witt announced the executive committee approved:

- a special allocation of $2,700 to the People's City Mission for electrical renovation;
- a $20,000 advance to the YMCA against its 1977 allocation;
- the appointment of Glenn Bonacker as chairman of the United Way nominating committee.

Paint sprayers hit cars, house

Lincoln police are looking for the person or persons who have a destructive sense of humor.

Sometime Wednesday night or Thursday morning the vandals sprayed black paint on 16 cars and one house. Someone else painted an obscene word in yellow paint on the side of another car.

The painters apparently struck along Judson and Knox from 43rd to 44th and from 47th to 49th St. The vandals painted the sides of cars, headlights and windows.

Estimated damage to the cars is $1,405 and another $150 in damage was done to the side of a house at 3201 N. 44th St. The vandals either ran out of black paint or someone else painted the side of one car in yellow paint. That car also was parked near 48th and Judson.

Attorney general's opinion validates woman's election

Hastings (AP) — Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas has handed down two opinions on a disputed election in the Adams County Educational Unit No. 9.

Douglas gave the opinions to Secretary of State Allen Beermann, who has ordered Adams County Clerk Anita Hawes to issue an election certificate to Mrs. Pauline Dudek.

A question arose to her eligibility to sit as an Adams County member of the unit because her son attends a Webster County school and their taxes are paid to Webster County.

However, the family lives in Adams County. Douglas determined that Mrs. Dudek should receive the election certificate because no citizen had challenged her qualifications within a 10 day limit set by law.

Douglas' other opinion said neither the county clerk nor secretary of state have any authority to challenge the qualification of someone who files.

Beermann said, "If there is anyone who feels she (referring to Mrs. Dudek) is not qualified due to her particular location geographically then some person will have to take it to court and get a court determination."

Mrs. Hawes received the decision by mail. She said she will issue the election certificate.

Utilities to share telephone number

Last year about 250 incidents were recorded of people digging into telephone cables, gas mains, power lines and other underground utilities.

In the hopes of reducing the number of those incidents, Lincoln utilities Thursday announced a new program of "One Call Covers All."

With one telephone call, contractors or homeowners who are planning to dig for any reason can summon all five Lincoln utilities to the site to mark underground utilities with flags.

The service is free, and may save the caller money because anyone who damages an underground utility is liable for the cost of the repair.

In the past a person would have had to call five utilities to obtain the same service, said C. K. Johansen of Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The "One Call Covers All" has been planned over a three-year period by the LT&T, Cengas, the Lincoln Electric System and the City Public Works and Public Utilities Department.

Participants in the program are distributing key chains, clipboards for field superintendents, decals for excavation equipment and other knickknacks which bear the telephone number (477-0547) of the new program.

Johansen said similar programs have been successful in reducing the number of damaged utilities lines by 50%.

One of the biggest benefits of the program, he noted, will be to reduce service disruptions to customers.

Nominations requested by wildlife federation

Firth (UPI) — The Nebraska Wildlife Federation Thursday said nominations are open for the group's third outstanding conservation achievement awards competition.

Frank Andelt, awards committee chairman, said the awards recognize groups and individuals who have contributed to the wise use of management and of the state's wildlife and other natural resources.

The awards program recognizes and encourages work by private citizens and groups, government officials, educators, industrial firms and the communications media, he said.

The highest honor, the conservationist of the year award, is awarded for outstanding overall conservation effort and achievement in the conservation cause, Andelt said.

Award categories include wildlife, soil, water, air, forest, youth and legislative conservationist of the year, and conservation communicator, educator and organization of the year, he said.

Not all the awards are given annually, he said, but nominations will be accepted for all categories until Jan. 3, 1977.

Campaign reports needed

Secretary of State Allen Beermann reminded all candidates for public office and committees that the final expenditure-receipt reports are due Monday.

Candidates for state and district posts in the Nov. 2 general election and all committees must file the report with Beermann's office. Local candidates and committees must file with the county clerk or election commissioner, as applicable.

Beermann said if individuals or committees lost the reporting forms, they should notify his office immediately or obtain forms locally.

Candidates or committees failing or refusing to file, regardless of an election win or loss, are subject to misdemeanor charges by the state attorney general or county attorney. Those who were elected but fail to file the report may not receive their election certificates.

Kiyoshi Sumiya
... to be main speaker.

Japanese speaker set

Kiyoshi Sumiya, Japan's consul general at Chicago, will be the main speaker Monday at the "Knowing About Japan" in-service training program to be held Sunday through Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Asian Studies Committee and the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the program is the first of its kind aimed at promoting an understanding of modern Japan through American schools.

Also addressing the elementary and secondary school teachers at the program will be Yoshuharu Nishikawa, executive director of the Japan Trade Center in Chicago, and Kimiaki Sasada, agricultural expert at the Trade Center.

A career diplomat since 1948, Sumiya has served as minister and deputy chief of mission at the Japanese embassy in Moscow and has held posts in India and Canada. From 1972 to 1974, he was deputy representative to the Japan-United States Committee under the Treaty of Mutual Cooperation and Security between Japan and the United States.

Dropout-alcohol link to be studied

Washington, D.C., McAllen, Tex., and Lincoln, Neb., apparently have little in common, but the three soon will be put under the spotlight for a National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse (NIAAA) study.

The federal program plans to study the effect, if any, of alcohol on school dropouts in the three cities, Bob Adams, director of the Lincoln

Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD), told his board Thursday.

Previous local studies have indicated a correlation between alcohol use and dropping out of school, he said. However, in preliminary visits to youth agencies here, a researcher was told that professionals thought there was no correlation, Adams said.

Omaha bus service cuts Council Bluffs

Omaha (AP) — The board of Metro Area Transit notified the City of Council Bluffs Thursday that it had terminated its contract for bus service until past bills are paid and a new contract is drawn up.

The new contract would set a specific time in which the city must pay its monthly bill or face termination of service.

The board voted after the Bluffs City Council voted earlier this week to withhold payment of about $30,000 owed MAT for service during September.

"If they can't afford the service, we can't afford to subsidize them," said MAT Board Chairman Fred Thoma.

"You can't subsidize them with Nebraska tax money," said Frederick Brown, a deputy city attorney who advises MAT.

Jerome Erdman, executive director of MAT, said the bus firm was not paid $62,000 owed by Council Bluffs for July and August until Wednesday.

MAT has provided service under a contract since 1972 after two private companies serving the Omaha-Council Bluffs area went out of business.

Erdman said he was told the city can't afford the present level of service in Council Bluffs. He said MAT has offered alternative forms of service, but the decision must be made in the Bluffs and not by MAT.

The bills paid to MAT represent the difference between the revenue from passengers and the total cost of operating MAT buses in Council Bluffs.

Bus riders get some protection

Bus patrons who board and alight on Q St. between 13th and 12th will soon receive some protection from the elements. City workers this week began assembling about $1,000 worth of materials into a temporary bus shelter. City Finance Director Jim Mallon, a member of the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) board, said that bus officials had hoped to receive federal funds for eight shelters, as well as 13 buses, several months ago. But the grant has been tied up in Washington he said, and in the meantime bus officials decided to put up an experimental temporary shelter. Depending on the reception it receives, he said, more temporary shelters may be built in downtown Lincoln. The new shelter will be 32 feet long and five feet wide.

Water sprayed on hay shipped as drought aid

Louis Wiebe, president of the Nebraska Farmers Union, reported Thursday he had received a letter from South Dakota indicating at least one load of Nebraska hay shipped to drought stricken cattlemen in South Dakota had been sprayed with water to add weight.

"This is a deplorable act, especially after the severe summer drought our neighbors have experienced. Anyone who is suspicious about hay being bathed to increase its weight should call the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office in Lincoln," Wiebe said.

South Dakota farmers are eligible for government aid to get hay shipped to them to keep their cattle alive because of the severe summer drought.

Free tuition taxation plan worries colleges

Proposed Internal Revenue Service regulations which would treat free tuition given to college staff dependents as taxable are causing some concern at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

A faculty committee is looking at the proposed changes, said Paul Laursen, academic dean, adding "I'm sure the faculty will write some letters to congressmen and officials in protest."

The private college has a "fair number" of students taking advantage of the free tuition offered to dependents or spouses of Wesleyan staff, said Laursen.

And the number is expected to grow larger in the next five or six years since more faculty have children nearing the college age, he said.

Union College also has a partial rebate program for staff dependents if the combined income of the parents is less than $22,000, said Dean Hubbard, academic dean.

Hubbard said the school wouldn't have any "great argument" if the rebate were declared taxable, but the college would prefer the policy remained unchanged.

Bona fide scholarships would not be affected by the new IRS proposal. The revenue service has invited written comments on regulation through Dec. 17. The IRS may hold public hearings on the matter.

Senior center proposal involves 75th & O site

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer
The Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging Thursday took no position on a proposal for a senior citizen housing development at 75th and O.
According to Don Jacobs, representing the Golden Plains Retirement Villa, the proposal involves construction of a three-story private facility to accommodate 100 to 115 residents at a monthly rental ranging from $425 to $725.
Noting that there is a need for housing for the elderly, Jacobs said plans call for a board and room plan with three types of units ranging from studio apartments to quarters with two double beds.
However, he said there are no plans now for kitchen units in the apartments but only for common eating areas.
Pointing to other facilities in Lincoln where a substantial down payment or "buying-in" fee is paid, Jacobs said his plan would be strictly a month to month arrangement. It would not fall in the low-rent or subsidized housing for the elderly category.

The monthly rental would include maid service, all meals and linen service.
Preliminary plans call for "living room" areas on each floor as well as one large multi-purpose room for crafts, cards, etc.
Although many plans are not complete at this time, Jacobs said, it is anticipated the possible transportation problem at that location would be alleviated by the home running a shuttle daily to both the Gateway and downtown Lincoln shopping areas.
Construction of such a development would require a special use permit from the City of Lincoln for the property which has been the site of a nine-hole golf course.
Jacobs said, to his knowledge, no public disclosure of the senior citizen housing development plans had been made to area residents who had been promised a compromise proposal to previous plans they had strongly opposed.

Man files suit over rent refusal

A Lincolnite has filed an $82,000 lawsuit in U.S. District Court, alleging that a Lincoln couple refused to rent a commercial property to him because he is black.
Tommy Latham, 830 N. 35th, brought the action against Erwn and Ruby Schnieber, 1136 N. 38th, in connection with Latham's attempt to rent property at 2714 N. 48th.
The suit says the Schniebers offered Latham a rental contract but, when he met with them again three days later, they refused to rent the property to him but continued to advertise it for rent.

Latham said in his suit that he was "forced to postpone or abandon his business adventure" resulting in a $12,000 loss. Latham is also seeking $30,000 in punitive damages and $40,000 for "shame, embarrassment, humiliation and mental anguish."
Schnieber has denied Latham's charges.

Judge Brodkey cites incorrect dissent report

Associated Press
Supreme Court Judge Donald Brodkey said Thursday a portion of his dissent from a majority decision by the court was incorrectly reported.

The case involved George J. Siers' conviction for embezzling funds from Pathfinder II Ltd., a limited partnership.

In his dissent, Brodkey said the issue of whether a partnership really existed should have been decided by a jury. It was instead decided by the trial court judge.

The Associated Press quoted Brodkey correctly on that issue. But the AP story reported Brodkey said the partnership did not exist. His dissent actually said the record showed Sier had asked for dismissal of the case because, in the view of the defense, the partnership's existence had not been proved.

An additional response written by Brodkey was distributed to newsmen hours after the court's opinions were released Wednesday. Brodkey said Thursday that he had written the response days before, and said he wanted to make it clear he had not written it on the spur of the moment and then had it released.

Disease Center investigator aiding Hilton probe

An investigator from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., currently is visiting Lincoln to help pinpoint the source of apparent food poisoning at the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.
According to Dr. E. D. Lyman, director of the Lancaster County Health Department, the investigator arrived Tuesday evening and has been working with the State Department of Health and the county health department personnel.

Lyman said the investigator has "no big revelations at this time," but he is reviewing data collected by the state and county health departments. Also, tests are being run on fecal and vomiting specimens of those who became ill and on rectal swabs taken from kitchen employees at the hotel, he added.

To date, approximately 60 persons reported vomiting, diarrhea and stomach pains during or shortly after they attended two different meetings at the Lincoln Hilton.

City switching parking meters to higher rates

Rate going from nickel an hour to dime an hour; city will give you two hours for quarter.

By Gordon Winters

Star Staff Writer

From the polished wood, carpet, drapes and plants of the mayoral offices came the directive: parking meter rates will double.

Now it's time for the nuts and bolts people to take over. What happens?

Parts costing $7,700 are on order. Workers are preparing to spend a total of 100 working days modifying 2,000 meters.

Altogether, it will cost about $12,000, or $6 per meter, to double the parking meter rate to ten cents an hour, according to City Traffic Engineer Robert Holsinger.

How long it will take is open to question. Something less than six months is the answer, according to Construction Maintenance Superintendent Jim Huff.

He plans to have one man working on the meters full-time. And "if we have snow this deep," he said, holding a hand three feet from the floor, "and have four guys standing around, we'll teach them how to change parking meters pretty fast."

The modification is not extensive, according to

Holsinger. He said it involves only three parts, the coin slot plate, the dial plate and a part of gear mechanism.

Motorists will find that the modified meters allow them to pay even more than the going rate. A quarter slot allows the motorist to pay 25 cents for two hours, instead of the 20 cents a combination of coins will total.

"It's a convenience," Holsinger said with a serious frown. "People might not have the right change." "People won't walk across the street for a quarter," suggested Huff.

If there are any bargain hunters among motorists, however, there will be bargains to be had during the gradual changeover.

By driving to the next block, for example, the motorist might find a cheaper meter. In fact, the situation exists now. The new meters on 13th and on O St. already have the higher rates.

The actual work on the meters will be done inside, according to Huff. The city has a supply of spare parking meter innards which allows replacement while the modifications are being done.

During the modification, workers also will be performing regular maintenance chores on the meters, such as applying graphite lubrication.

When the change is complete, the meters should be taking in more than $300,000 annually, according to Holsinger. Last year the meters took in $178,000.

The total will not simply double because half-hour meters will not be altered. The rate for those meters has been ten cents an hour for years.

Even with the 100% increase, the amount collected will not equal the costs of paying for meter maintenance, meter maids and other police enforcement.

From Holsinger's perspective, Lincoln parkers have a bargain. "As far as I've been able to determine we have the lowest parking meter rates in the country," he said.

Cosmic rays blamed for sudden disappearance of dinosaurs;

Bucharest (UPI) — A Romanian radiobiologist has conducted experiments on heredity he says confirms a theory that cosmic rays caused the disappearance of dinosaurs about 70 million years ago, the official news agency Agerpres said.

There have been several theories about why the huge reptiles vanished but no definitive reason. The most famous theory was put forth by Charles Darwin — they were unfit to survive.

But paleontologists know the extinction of the dinosaurs was sudden, by geologic standards, because no fossil traces of them have been found later than the Cretaceous period, which began 136 million years ago and lasted 71 million years.

Prof. Andrei Lazany, 62, said his experiments at the Dr. Petru Groza Agronomic Institute in Cluj-Napoca confirmed the theory of a West German scientist that cosmic rays killed off dinosaurs by destroying their genes.

Prof. Otto H. Schindewolf, 80, a former chief paleontologist at the Geological State Institute in West Berlin, has theorized that cosmic rays from the explosion of a star during the Cretaceous period wiped out many species.

The experiments demonstrated that species with big chromosomes will suffer from radioactivity harmless to species such as small mammals, that have small chromosomes, Agerpres said.

Lazany, Agerpres said, "examined the fossil remains of some dinosaurs and was surprised to find out that the dimensions of their bone cells grew by the end of the Cretaceous period."

"Thus, he drew the conclusion that the dinosaurs also had very big chromosomes and were as such radiosensitive."

Playboy to feature Southern belles

Nashville (UPI) — Since the eyes of the nation are turning south so much these days, Playboy magazine is taking a look at the region's women.

"We have ignored the Southern women for a long time, but now the South is growing by leaps and bounds. Now the South is the thing," says Playboy photographer David Chan.

Chan, who photographed the spread on "The Girls of Washington," is touring cities like Atlanta, Houston, New Orleans and Nashville for an upcoming layout on "The Girls of the New South."

"The South is booming with good-looking women," Chan says cheerfully. He has been researching his subject in nightclubs, singles bars and even clothing stores.

Chan praises Southern women for their "mystique," saying, "They wear clothes instead of showing off in the see-through stuff." But he says they have no qualms about ditching their clothes for the chance to appear in a Playboy centerfold.

"These girls have been brought up reading Playboy and they are not embarrassed by it. When I ask them if they'd like to be photographed, they are flattered."

Senior center proposal involves 75th & O site

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer
The Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging Thursday took no position on a proposal for a senior citizen housing development at 75th and O.
According to Don Jacobs, representing the Golden Plains Retirement Villa, the proposal involves construction of a three-story private facility to accommodate 100 to 115 residents at a monthly rental ranging from $425 to $725.
Noting that there is a need for housing for the elderly, Jacobs said plans call for a board and room plan with three types of units ranging from studio apartments to quarters with two double beds.
However, he said there are no plans now for kitchen units in the apartments but only for common eating areas.
Pointing to other facilities in Lincoln where a substantial down payment or "buying-in" fee is paid, Jacobs said his plan would be strictly a month to month arrangement. It would not fall in the low-rent or subsidized housing for the elderly category.

The monthly rental would include maid service, all meals and linen service.
Preliminary plans call for "living room" areas on each floor as well as one large multi-purpose room for crafts, cards, etc.
Although many plans are not complete at this time, Jacobs said, it is anticipated the possible transportation problem at that location would be alleviated by the home running a shuttle daily to both the Gateway and downtown Lincoln shopping areas.
Construction of such a development would require a special use permit from the City of Lincoln for the property which has been the site of a nine-hole golf course.
Jacobs said, to his knowledge, no public disclosure of the senior citizen housing development plans had been made to area residents who had been promised a compromise proposal to previous plans they had strongly opposed

Man files suit over rent refusal

A Lincolnite has filed an $82,000 lawsuit in U.S. District Court, alleging that a Lincoln couple refused to rent a commercial property to him because he is black.
Tommy Latham, 830 N. 35th, brought the action against Erwin and Ruby Schmeier, 1136 N. 38th, in connection with Latham's attempt to rent property at 2714 N. 48th.
The suit says the Schmeiers offered Latham a rental contract but, when he met with them again three days later, they refused to rent the property to him but continued to advertise it for rent.

Latham said in his suit that he was "forced to postpone or abandon his business adventure" resulting in a $12,000 loss. Latham is also seeking $30,000 in punitive damages and $40,000 for "shame, embarrassment, humiliation and mental anguish."
Schmeier has denied Latham's charges.

Judge Brodkey cites incorrect dissent report

Associated Press
Supreme Court Judge Donald Brodkey said Thursday a portion of his dissent from a majority decision by the court was incorrectly reported.

The case involved George J. Siers' conviction for embezzling funds from Pathfinder II Ltd., a limited partnership.

In his dissent, Brodkey said the issue of whether a partnership really existed should have been decided by a jury. It was instead decided by the trial court judge.

The Associated Press quoted Brodkey correctly on that issue. But the AP story reported Brodkey said the partnership did not exist. His dissent actually said the record showed Sier had asked for dismissal of the case because, in the view of the defense, the partnership's existence had not been proved.

An additional response written by Brodkey was distributed to newsmen hours after the court's opinions were released Wednesday. Brodkey said Thursday that he had written the response days before, and said he wanted to make it clear he had not written it on the spur of the moment and then had it released.

Disease Center investigator aiding Hilton probe

An investigator from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., currently is visiting Lincoln to help pinpoint the source of apparent food poisoning at the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.
According to Dr. E. D. Lyman, director of the Lancaster County Health Department, the investigator arrived Tuesday evening and has been working with the State Department of Health and the county health department personnel.

Lyman said the investigator has "no big revelations at this time," but he is reviewing data collected by the state and county health departments. Also, tests are being run on fecal and vomiting specimens of those who became ill and on rectal swabs taken from kitchen employees at the hotel, he added.

To date, approximately 60 persons reported vomiting, diarrhea and stomach pains during or shortly after they attended two different meetings at the Lincoln Hilton.

City switching parking meters to higher rates

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

From the polished wood, carpet, drapes and plants of the mayoral offices came the directive: parking meter rates will double.

Now it's time for the nuts and bolts people to take over. What happens?

Parts costing $7,700 are on order. Workers are preparing to spend a total of 100 working days modifying 2,000 meters.

Altogether, it will cost about $12,000, or $6 per meter, to double the parking meter rate to ten cents an hour, according to City Traffic Engineer Robert Holsinger.

How long it will take is open to question. Something less than six months is the answer, according to Construction Maintenance Superintendent Jim Huff.

He plans to have one man working on the meters full-time. And "if we have snow this deep," he said, holding a hand three feet from the floor, "and have four guys standing around, we'll teach them how to change parking meters pretty fast."

The modification is not extensive, according to

Rate going from nickel an hour to dime an hour; city will give you two hours for quarter.

Holsinger. He said it involves only three parts, the coin slot plate, the dial plate and a part of gear mechanism. Motorists will find that the modified meters allow them to pay even more than the going rate. A quarter slot allows the motorist to pay 25 cents for two hours, instead of the 20 cents a combination of coins will total.

"It's a convenience," Holsinger said with a serious frown. "People might not have the right change." "People won't walk across the street for a quarter," suggested Huff.

If there are any bargain hunters among motorists, however, there will be bargains to be had during the gradual changeover.

By driving to the next block, for example, the motorist might find a cheaper meter. In fact, the situation exists now. The new meters on 13th and on O St. already have the higher rates.

The actual work on the meters will be done inside, according to Huff. The city has a supply of spare parking meter innards which allows replacement while the modifications are being done.

During the modification, workers also will be performing regular maintenance chores on the meters, such as applying graphite lubrication.

When the change is complete, the meters should be taking in more than $300,000 annually, according to Holsinger. Last year the meters took in $178,000.

The total will not simply double because half-hour meters will not be altered. The rate for those meters has been ten cents an hour for years.

Even with the 100% increase, the amount collected will not equal the costs of paying for meter maintenance, meter maids and other police enforcement.

From Holsinger's perspective, Lincoln parkers have a bargain. "As far as I've been able to determine we have the lowest parking meter rates in the country," he said.

Neighbors who drop in may be special problem

DEAR ABBY: The letter from TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING, concerning a neighbor who was wearing out her welcome, is similar to the problem I encountered. This neighbor would pop in on me often, and always without notice. Sometimes I was entertaining a relative or another friend, and frequently I had a lot of work to do and no time for a social visit. I became frustrated and didn't know how to tell her without hurting her feelings.

Finally, in desperation, I took this nice neighbor into my bedroom and closed the door. Then I explained that I really liked her and valued her friendship, but there were times when I wanted to be alone with my friends or family, and as a favor to me to please phone to see if it was all right to come over.

She was very understanding, and thanked me for being honest with her. Now she visits me less often and always phones first. Today we are the best of friends.

Abby, if we would all speak our minds honestly and with love, we could accomplish much.

G.S. IN VA.

DEAR G. S.: Read on for a letter from a woman who lacked your compassion and lived to regret it!

DEAR ABBY: I am a recently retired woman who once enjoyed a successful and fulfilling business career. I've remained single by choice.

I live alone, but I'm far from lonely. I have all the friends I want. I like my privacy and have never encouraged visitors to drop in.

The high-rise in which I live has excellent security, and no one gets into the building without being screened.

One evening about 7:30, there was a knock on my door. I wasn't expecting anyone so I asked who was there. It was a widow who lives on my floor, and with whom I had had only a nodding acquaintance. She said she was "lonely," and didn't know what to do with herself, and asked if she could come in and visit for a while.

I told her politely but bluntly that I was busy, and didn't approve of visitors dropping in without phoning first. (I have an unlisted phone number, which I did not give her.) She apologized for bothering me and left.

Abby, I've always felt that people who intrude on others should be treated with the same lack of consideration they give those upon whom they intrude. I felt quite proud of myself for not getting trapped by a bore who would probably be difficult to get rid of.

The next evening a friend telephoned to ask if I knew the woman in my building who had committed suicide the night before.

If you have already guessed that she was the woman who knocked on my door, you are right.

HARD LESSON LEARNED

DEAR ABBY: To those who write you about problems with relatives, may I submit what I call Einstein's Second or Revised Law on Relativity: Your chances of getting along with your relatives increases directly in proportion with the distance you keep away from them.

Take bidding test

By B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠Q9743 ♥8 ♦J65 ♣J962
2. ♠QJ852 ♥953 ♦A94 ♣J7
3. ♠K8532 ♥64 ♦J3 ♣KQ5
4. ♠J7643 ♥Q9872 ♦10 ♣94

1. Four spades. North's four club bid is a slam try that indicates good spade support and at the same time guarantees first-round club control. The two notrump bid announced 22 to 24 points and balanced distribution (with or without satisfactory spade support). But the four club bid redefines North's values in that he now pinpoints maximum point-count as well as good spades.

You are therefore in good position to gauge partner's values, but since you have minimum values for your previous bid and know that a slam is virtually impossible, you sign off with four spades. North may have a hand that looks something like this:

♠AK6 ♥KJ2 ♦AQ4 ♣AK85

2. Four diamonds. This time you have a far better hand and should show it by bidding four diamonds. If partner then bids four hearts, still another slam try, you should willingly undertake six spades. But if, over four diamonds, North bids four spades, you are probably best advised to pass. You have no values beyond those already expressed.

3. Four notrump. This is Blackwood, pure and simple. You plan to bid six spades if partner's response shows either three aces or all four aces. Of course, if partner indicates only two aces, you stop at five spades. It is true that if partner has exactly the right hand, including all the aces, you will have a reasonable shot at a grand slam. But, all factors considered, it is probably best in the long run to settle for a small slam.

Bridge

4. Four spades. There may be a strong temptation to bid four hearts at this point, but it should be firmly resisted. North is obviously trying to get to a slam in spades. The best way to talk him out of this notion is to bid four spades and inform him that you have no interest in a slam. A four heart bid at this point would be a cooperative move towards a slam and could get you into trouble.

Defense of education called for

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The new executive director of the Education Commission of the States told a group of 700 educators in Lincoln Thursday that he doesn't believe "this country has lost its faith in education."

Dr. Warren Hill, an educator from Maine, told a joint gathering of the Nebraska State School Boards Association and the Nebraska Association of School Administrators, "we still must defend education in a democracy."

"Ever since Horace Mann told the Massachusetts Assembly to give him money and he'd close the jails, education has been waging a battle against negative attitudes," he added.

Education probably will never empty the nation's jails, Hill said, but "it's still the best cause for upward mobility we have in this world. What schools have contributed to society, in economical, cultural and social ways, makes our school systems worthy of a better report card than they often receive."

Hill, a Canadian immigrant who almost died from swine flu as a baby in 1918, says he "treasures every thing he got from American education. It was the education of public schools which made a vaccine for swine flu possible," he added.

"I've walked in your shoes," Hill said, noting that he was a school board member and an administrator.

Problems with today's education are: mobility of population; a breakdown of the family structure as we've known it in the past; too much television; conspicuous consumption; a lack of safety in neighborhood schools and the failure to adequately define why we educate children.

"A young student asked his mother if she knew his teacher, Hill said. "When she replied, no, he asked, how do you expect to both raise me if you don't know each other?"

Grand Island possible center of global net

Washington (UPI) — Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said Thursday a report is due Dec. 10 on four sites, including Grand Island, being considered by the Air Force for a worldwide navigational headquarters.

Mrs. Smith said the headquarters would be a master control station working with satellites to provide a global position system known as Nav Star. The headquarters are to be operational in 1982, with the first satellite launched in March of next year.

The Grand Island site under consideration is at the Cornhusker Ammunition Plant. Other locations being considered include Fortuna Air Force Base in North Dakota and Fort McCoy and Volk Field, both in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Smith said no cost estimate is available, but the cost would be in excess of $10 million.

LES to seek funds for study

The Lincoln Electric System will be asking City Council approval to hire a consultant at $50,000 for a six-month study to come up with a load management program, as recommended by an alternate rate study just completed by LES.

The rate study recommends a modified "cost of service" rate structure for all LES customers, to be phased in over a two-year period.

The new rate structure will be designed to more equitably distribute the costs of electric service among customers, according to a final report on the study released last week.

Thursday night LES staff presented the finished report to members of the Technical Steering Committee, composed of representatives from citizens' and business organizations, which has been meeting for the past ten months.

The new structure will break costs down into three components of a customer's electric bill: customer-related, energy-related, and demand-related costs.

The first two types of costs will be the same for all users in each broad category of use, but computing demand-related costs is tricky business.

The proposed load management study will help with this, according to power manager Phil Michaels.

The study recommends installing special meters in some customers' homes, beginning in 1978, to record electricity use minute-by-minute throughout the year.

The meters, at a cost of about $1,000 apiece to install and maintain, will allow computer printouts of each surveyed customer's pattern of use.

Average load factors for customers using similar amounts of power will then be used to base demand-related charges in billing all customers.

The actual rates to be charged in 1977 will be presented to the Council for approval sometime early in December, according to Walt Canney, LES Director.

The rate increase will be less than 6% — a smaller increase than predicted several months ago — due to lower than anticipated levels of energy use in 1976, Canney said.

Exon asks educators to join aid battle

Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon challenged a group of Nebraska educators, Thursday, to "get into the fight for more funds if they want a greater share of state aid."

Exon's challenge came as he addressed the opening session of the Nebraska State School Boards Association gathered for their annual convention in Lincoln. He responded to a proposed resolution read by association President Irv Schwartz of Hildreth, which urged the state to "provide between 45 and 50% of public school financing. Currently about 28% of the financing is from the state."

"We are not unaware of the problems you have," Exon said. "But other agencies also want the money. For every dollar in taxes the state gets, it spends 51 cents for subdivisions giving aid, and for individual aid. Another 25 cents goes to post-secondary education," he added.

"The remaining 24 cents are used by all the other state agencies," Exon added. Only if these agencies are willing to cut their expenditures, to promise no new programs, will we have "a few extra million available for the schools."

"People aren't ready for another tax increase, and other agencies, don't appear to be ready to fight for tax increases, even if it makes them unpopular with other groups," he said.

Exon said he could offer "some ray of hope" about state aid increases which have been "discussed at great length inside the administration."

State's open burning ban remains in effect

State Fire Marshal Paul Sarnecki Thursday reminded Nebraska residents that a ban on open burning remains in effect.

Sarnecki said his office has received telephone calls from fire officials in the Fullerton and Scottsbluff areas having problems with persons who apparently have forgotten about the ban on opening burning due to the dry field conditions.

He said local fire officials may be contacted about obtaining a waiver to conduct open burning operations.

Fibreboard to sell

San Francisco (AP) — Fibreboard Corp. says it plans to sell its carton division which last year accounted for 30 per cent, or $85 million, of the company's total sales.

Degraded EX-MOONIE, to speak in Lincoln. Former member Dennis Coper of the Church of the Unification founded by the Reverend Sun Myung Moon, will speak on the topic.

Neighborhood theater to reopen

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

The Joyo Theater — a neighborhood institution since 1912 — will reopen its doors Dec. 1.

The little neighborhood movie house at the corner of 61st and Havelock dimmed its projector for the last time Oct. 21.

But the fond memories of the Joyo kept its spirit burning during the nearly four weeks since it first exhibited a "For Sale," sign in the cage which had housed ticket takers. They had sold long lines of patrons neighborhood theater-priced admissions to family-type movies.

A Lincoln man, Jerry Gulland, has purchased the cherished little theatre and plans to reopen it Dec. 1, according to Ron Brannin of Gateway Realty.

Gulland said the theater will run a full seven-day evening schedule with weekend matinees of all movies from G through R ratings.

Prior to reopening Dec. 1, plans call for some refurbishing. Heat lights will replace the floodlights under the marquee for the comfort of the many bus riders who wait in front of the theater for the Havelock bus.

The theater was sold by Phil McDermitt, an Omaha businessman, who didn't find it economically feasible to keep the theatre open after his partner who had managed it became ill.

Brannin didn't reveal the sale price but said the asking price was $65,000 for the real estate which includes the zoned land, the 110 by 40 foot building, the fixtures and equipment and the barbershop lease for the barbershop which is housed at one side of the two-story building.

But, according to Brannin, his phone had practically rung off the hook with calls from concerned people upon hearing of the possible demise of the little theatre where many had stood in line as children to watch Saturday afternoon movies.

With a tradition of family features, the theatre had served as a "babysitter for the area," for many years, and was also popular with adults both from a monetary standpoint and for convenient parking, Brannin said.

Brannin estimated he had had between 200 and 250 calls from people who were sincerely concerned about the theatre's fate and whether it might fall prey to someone who wanted to make it "another pornographic movie house."

Several indicated they would like to raise the money to save the theatre; some had ideas for converting it to small theatres, a dinner theatre with live stage entertainment, or for converting it to little shops similar to the Glass Menagerie in downtown Lincoln.

But the bulk of the calls and visits Brannin had since Oct. 21 were for nostalgic reasons — the Joyo was Lincoln's only neighborhood theatre.

The nostalgia, the "grabbing something out of the past," was the primary reason for the incredible number of calls, Brannin said.

Goal is saving neighborhoods

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

Members of the Lincoln community development (CD) program staff said Thursday night that saving deteriorating neighborhoods would be the thrust of (CD) funds for Lincoln in fiscal 1977.

Lincoln's program has about $1.8 million somewhere in the Washington Housing and Urban Development Department, George Chick, CD director, told a nearly full city council chamber.

To get the money, the city, through the CD department, must put together a program with enough facets to confuse a corporate attorney.

But, the facets boil down to helping low and moderate income families find and own adequate housing while ridding the city at large of blighted areas through redevelopment programs.

The redevelopment programs will be centered in certain areas that need it most, Chick said.

"For instance we looked into the Malone area and made a 'guesstimate' that a complete redevelopment program would cost more than $2 million," Chick said. Since the city's only getting $1.8 million, and other areas need help too, the program will be done through ongoing project that eventually will end in the salvation of the neighborhood.

Lincoln's funding is coming on a three-year program, Chick said which ends with the 1977 fiscal funding. But, more funding through more grants is expected to continue from there.

The CD department held the meeting to explain these facets in an abstract form to tell the citizenry what it will be doing between now and the March deadline for CD funding applications.

Somebody out there doesn't like windows

In a new twist on what appears to be a rash of broken windows in Lincoln recently, someone threw large pieces of concrete through the windows of two cars late Wednesday night.

A car belonging to David Price of Council Bluffs had both front windshield and rear window broken by concrete chunks in the parking lot of the Traveler's Motel, 3820 Cornhusker, causing an estimated $550 damage.

Another car owned by Patrick K. Conover, 6235 Ballard, had its rear window smashed by a piece of concrete in the lot at the Royal Grove, 340 Cornhusker. Damage was estimated at $125.

Leroy Uglov, 5143 Cleveland, had a different sort of window trouble Wednesday night in the parking lot behind his apartment building. He discovered his car's rear window carefully removed — no broken glass, no bent chrome.

Also, early Thursday the plate glass window at Liming's Furniture store, 2350 O, was broken by an unknown object, causing $475 damage to the window and four lamps in the display area.

What happened to that dent?

Detroit (AP) — When Robert Brown climbed into his car, he noticed a few little things seemed different.

Like the dent that was on the right side of the 1971 brown four-door Ford: it wasn't there anymore. There was a new smudge on the hood. It had the wrong license plates.

Then he checked further and discovered the car's registration showed it belonged to somebody named Maurice Kirk.

New York (AP) — Hopes that an increase in import oil prices might be avoided or spread out over a period of time pushed the stock market sharply higher Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 12.05 points to 950.13, its largest daily advance since Oct. 29.

Advances more than doubled declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

On Thursday, Italian officials said they had received assurances that Venezuela, a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, would try to "avoid or at least to limit an increase in the price of oil" at the OPEC meeting scheduled for next month. If other OPEC countries insist on a price hike, the increase might be spread out over a period of time, the Venezuelans told the Italians.

Lenders still question married woman's salary

New York — When a working husband and wife apply for a mortgage, lenders are still apt to give the fish eye to the woman's income. Single women, in most cases, are now being treated about as well as their male counterparts. But bankers simply don't know how to assess the likelihood of a married woman's income continuing, at least through the critical first four years of the mortgage.

Under the law, a woman's income cannot be treated differently from her husband's. If the lender considers two years of working history as "stable" for a man, the same rule must be applied to women. In general, lenders are making conscientious efforts to obey these rules.

Nevertheless, it's hard to wipe a lifetime of prejudice out of the mind of a lending officer. Despite the tremendous difference in the economic status of women today, the new job opportunities, and the change in attitude about working wives, many lenders continue to believe that a woman's income is much more likely to stop than her husband's, or much more likely to show big declines.

Until recently, there was no data to refute these assumptions. But a recent study done for the Housing and Urban Development Department shows that lenders have seriously miscalculated the extent of women's commitment to the job market. Based on repeated interviews between 1967 and 1971 with a same group of women, the study found:

- The incomes of families where both husband and wife work can generally be expected to increase over four years. This is important to lenders, because the first four years of a mortgage are considered the most vulnerable. If it were typical for women to drop out of the labor force after getting a mortgage, as many lenders believe, the incomes of two-earner families would probably have shown a decline.
- As part of the study, lenders made estimates of the likely rate of income growth for two-earner families. It turned out that actual income growth was 25% better than the highest estimate and 125% better than the lowest estimate. Even in the late 1960s, women were much more attached to the labor market than lenders believed.
- The likelihood that the income of a two-earner family will decline by 5% (during one or more of the first four years of the mortgage) is only 7 to 10 percentage points higher than for the traditional, husband-headed family. This certainly ly does not support the traditional practice of discounting the woman's income by 50%.

— Even if income does decline by a small amount like 5%, there is at present no evidence that such a decline is associated with an increased number of mortgage defaults. This is a question that HUD plans to study in the future.

— The probability of a 20% decline in income is only 4 percentage points higher for a two-earner family.

— If the wife has a high-school diploma, the chances of a small income decline are cut in half.

— Income growth and stability for single women is about the same as for married men. Women who are family-heads fall only 7 or 8 percentage points behind married men in income growth, although their earnings are more likely to take a sudden dip (especially if the woman isn't a high-school graduate).

— In one respect the lenders' fears are justified: There's more likely to be a marital disruption in a two-earner family. The chance of separation during the first four years of the mortgage is 3.5% where the wife stays home and 7% where the wife works. Lenders often cite marital problems as a leading cause of defaults and foreclosures.

— There appeared to be no difference between blue-collar and white-collar women in their basic commitment to the labor force.

As recently as late 1975, when the sex-discrimination provisions of the Fair Housing Act had been in effect for more than a year, an informal survey done as part of the HUD study showed that many lenders were still discounting the wife's income by 50%. But the new Equal Credit Opportunity Act has real teeth in it. Lenders are bringing themselves into compliance for fear of being sued.

Orange Bowl 'Juice Jug' for Big Eight co-leaders

Five teams may be tied for the Big Eight Conference lead as action resumes Saturday, but not a single one of those teams will be the master of its own destiny when it comes to earning a berth in the Orange Bowl which goes to the league champ.

The reason, of course, is that a two, or more likely, three-way tie for the championship will occur before the smoke clears.

For the first time ever, a team with two losses will get a piece of the crown.

Oklahoma and Oklahoma State are two of the five teams currently deadlocked for the top spot. The only way they will have a chance of keeping their Orange Bowl hopes alive is if winless Kansas State knocks off co-leader Colorado Saturday.

They have two chances of that happening — slim and none. It may be even more lopsided, as Colorado tries to impress the bowl promoters across the country, but I'll pick the Buffs by a conservative 35-10 count.

If that happens, Oklahoma State is out of the Orange Bowl picture regardless of how the Cowboys do against Iowa State in their clash at Stillwater.

Okie State, however, can be in a position to accept some other bowl bid with a win over Iowa State, so the Cowboys will have plenty of incentive.

Iowa State can't control its destiny toward an Orange Bowl bid, even with a victory of OSU. It would take that, plus a Nebraska triumph over Oklahoma next week, to give the Cyclones a trip to Miami.

I'm inclined to think Iowa State will miss the friendly home crowd which helped it get past Nebraska. The Cyclones will also miss quarterback Wayne Stanley, sidelined on the next-to-last play of the first half against the Huskers.

My pick: Oklahoma State 28, Iowa State 21.

Missouri and Kansas are out of the conference championship chase, but Mizzou would be an attractive team to a minor bowl with a win in its season finale.

The Tigers may have lost four games, but triumphs over USC, Ohio State and Nebraska are a strong selling point.

I'd think Mizzou should be about a 10-point pick: Missouri 24, Kansas 14.

While the Ivy League is through for the year and several others have this Saturday off while awaiting a final game over the Thanksgiving weekend — Nebraska-Oklahoma, Pitt-Penn State, Army-Navy and others — several key games are on the docket.

The Rose Bowl is at stake when Michigan and Ohio State tangle for the Big Ten title, while the same is true for the Pac-8 crown in the UCLA-USC matchup. I like both Michigan and UCLA.

Notre Dame faces a "must" game against Miami of Florida if the Irish hope to get a bowl bid invitation. I expect they'll get the job done.

In recap, here are the picks from the major conferences and areas across the country for this Saturday.

Big Eight: Oklahoma State 28, Iowa State 21; Colorado 35, Kansas State 10; Missouri 24, Kansas 14.
Big Ten: Michigan over Ohio State, Minnesota over Wisconsin, Michigan State over Iowa, Purdue over Indiana, Illinois over Northwestern.
Southwestern: Florida over Rice, Mississippi State over Mississippi, LSU over Tulane, Kentucky over Tennessee, Cincinnati over Vanderbilt.
Southwest: Texas over Baylor, Texas A&M over TCU, Arkansas over SMU, Florida over Rice, Texas Tech over Houston.
Pac Eight: UCLA over USC, Oregon over Oregon State, Washington over Washington State, Stanford over California.
Western Athletic: Wyoming over Air Force, Arizona over New Mexico, Arizona State over Colorado State, BYU over Utah, Hawaii over Texas El Paso.
Atlantic Coast: North Carolina over Duke, Maryland over Virginia, South Carolina over Clemson.
East: Boston College over Massachusetts, Holy Cross over Conn., Rutgers over Colgate, West Virginia over Syracuse, Villanova over Temple.
South: Citadel over Davidson, Virginia Tech over Florida State, Louisville over Boston U., Memphis State over Southern Mississippi, William & Mary over Richmond, VMI over Indiana State.
Midwest: Notre Dame over Miami, Fla.
SW & Rockies: North Texas State over Drake, New Mexico State over West Texas State, Tulsa over Wichita State, Pacific over Utah State.
Far West: Fresno over Santa Clara, Hawaii over Texas El Paso, San Diego State over Long Beach State.

One last chance gives him crown

Mission, Kan. (UPI) — There were 10 seconds to play and Ted McKnight of Michigan Tech was one-yard short of winning the NCAA Division II rushing title.

The problem was that Michigan Tech had the ball and Tech's Jim VanWagner, a two-time Division II rushing champ, was the man who was a yard ahead of McKnight in the rushing battle. Tech had its problems too. It trailed 21-14 and so it went to the air. Duluth's Todd Treichel intercepted the pass.

McKnight got one last chance and went off tackle for 28 yards, finishing with the rushing title, averaging 148.2 yards to 145.4 for VanWagner.

"Before we went on the field, coach Jim Malosky said, 'Ted you need one yard,'" recalled McKnight, who finished with 145 yards for the day. "So we got into the huddle and just like we always do when things get tough, we went to our traditional 'let's hold hands and get our energy generated'."

"You could feel it. It was beautiful. The play was called and the hole just opened. All I had to do was run."

McKnight also scored all three of Duluth's touchdowns to edge VanWagner, who passed for both of his team's score and ran for a two-point conversion, in the scoring race, 14.4 points to 11.1.

While the tight rushing battle has ended, a close one continues in receiving. Bo Darden of Shaw is leading this week with an average 6.125 receptions per game with Jim Magana of Hayward State next at 6.111 and Dan Fulton of Nebraska-Omaha third at 6.091. Fulton, who set Division II and III records with 1,581 pass receiving yards this year, finished his season last week while Darden and Magana finish the year this weekend.

There's no race in passing and total offense. June Jones of Portland State has locked up both with 21.5 completions and 302.7 yards per game.

John Stanfield of Mississippi Valley is still the punting leader at 45.5.

In Division III there were no leader changes this week except in rushing where Chuck Evans of Ferris State moved ahead of Joe Thompson of Augustana (Ill.), 150.9 to 143.3.

From News Wires

The New York Yankees, who were swept out of the World Series in an embarrassing four games by the Cincinnati Reds, plucked an integral cog from the Big Red Machine Thursday by signing free agent pitcher Don Gullett to a six-year contract worth an estimated $2 million.

But Gullett wasn't the only free agent to sign. Gary Matthews signed a five-year contract with the Atlanta Braves and there was speculation that Jerry Kapstein's news conference Friday will be to announce that Wayne Garland will go to Cleveland. Kapstein is the agent for many of the free agents, and six of his clients have signed with clubs.

And not to be outdone, Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley announced that Jack McKeon had signed a one-year pact to manage the A's.

Gullett, called the "modern Whitey Ford" by club president Gabe Paul, was the first acquisition by the Yankees since the free agent draft was conducted Nov. 11 and the club is close to adding a second free agent to its already bulging payroll, reportedly versatile second baseman Bobby Grich.

"Mr. Steinbrenner's pockets have not been depleted," said Paul of the club's chief officer, George Steinbrenner. "We're not retreating, we're advancing. We have been active and we will continue to be active."

Gullett, 25, was one of the chief architects in the Reds' World Series sweep with a 5-1 opening game victory in which he pitched 7 1-3 innings before leaving with a dislocated tendon. It was placed in a cast and he did not see any more action against the Yankees, but the lean southpaw said there are no more problems with his leg.

"I'm excited about coming to a team like the Yankees," said Gullett, who had an 11-3 record with the Reds last season despite a slow start because of a pinched nerve in the neck and an even slower finish with an undiagnosed shoulder injury.

Bo confident as game nears

Ann Arbor, Mich. (UPI) — Breezy Bo Schembechler, "confident of winning," said Thursday his favored fourth-rated Michigan football team was "in as good a shape" as possible for Saturday's Big Ten and Rose Bowl-deciding game against Ohio State.

"Being the favorite doesn't put any points on the board," Schembechler said. "But I'm always confident of winning."

"We're in about as good a shape as we possibly can be," said the relaxed Michigan coach, who twitted one Detroit sports broadcaster for acting like one of his rivals—then dared him to use the film clip on his nightly show.

Asked what kind of shape he personally was in, Schembechler deadpanned, "I need a hair cut."

The coach of the Wolverines, who underwent open heart surgery and thus missed spring practice, also confessed to violating his self-imposed 10 o'clock nightly curfew this week.

"I go home at 10 every night," he said. "But I have to admit I ran over a couple of times — like Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday."

Either the open heart surgery changed Schembechler's outlook on life or the noticeable lack of tension in the high-intensity coach is betraying the confidence he has in his team.

"We have never come out of this game where we had to say we laid an egg," he told his listeners at his late-week press conference. "They have never dominated us, even though they outscored us."

"The thing that hurt was when they got everything handed to them on a tie," Schembechler said, referring to the 10-10 outcome in 1973 that sent the Buckeyes to the Rose Bowl and Michigan to the television sets to watch.

Coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State holds a 4-2-1 edge over his one-time protege and no Schembechler-coached Michigan team has ever won its last game of a season.

The Buckeyes have gone to an unprecedented four straight Rose Bowls and a win or tie would give them No. 5.

Kapstein 'Superagent,' but fair, honest, too

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — Some baseball watchers call him "Superagent."

But players and baseball barons who deal directly with Jerry Kapstein talk about his honesty and fairness in a game often dominated by the dollar sign.

Who is this young lawyer who advises some of the game's best?

Who, without consulting the Cincinnati Reds, has made this old New England city, which doesn't even have a team, the current baseball capital of the world?

The 33-year-old Kapstein controls 10 of baseball's free agents. He signed half of them with new teams in two days — a fortnight after the Nov. 4 re-entry draft in New York.

Players and team officials have quietly shuttled in and out of Providence for face-to-face negotiations in Kapstein's small conference room-office in the city's tallest office building, owned by Hospital Trust National Bank.

You won't find the name "Kapstein, Jerry" on the ground floor directory because he doesn't want autograph hounds or nosy reporters camping on his doorstep.

When it is time for announcements, he calls news conferences behind the sterling-silver handled doors of the bank's oak-paneled 28th floor Executive Board room.

They look like well-orchestrated "events" as a swarm of reporters, cameramen and photographers jam into the room for a parade of separate announcements. They are short because other negotiations are always pending, either by long distance telephone calls or personal meetings downstairs.

"I don't like to waste time," Kapstein said. "I've got more baseball owners and players to talk to."

"We try to do things in a very efficient, organized style for the benefit of everybody. It makes it less hectic, with less of a carnival atmosphere," explains Kapstein's brother, Dan.

This is no one-man show. Danny Kapstein, a 1972 Northeastern University grad given a free-agent tryout as a punter with the New England Patriots, is right-hand man in a close-knit family operation.

Their mother, Gladys, is the coordinator, handling behind-the-scenes details like setting up schedules and making travel and lodging accommodations for Jerry's famous players.

His dad, Sherwin, is Rhode Island representative of the National Education Association. A long-time labor negotiator with experience in contract structuring, he works in an advisory capacity.

Kapstein came into the baseball spotlight in 1974 by representing Catfish Hunter in a New Year's Eve 1974 post-arbitration signing with the New York Yankees, much to the displeasure of Oakland A's owner Charlie Finley.

But his active involvement in sports began at age 13 as a statistician for local television sportscaster Chris Clark.

"He came up to me at Brown Stadium, this was 20 years ago, and asked me if I needed any help and he stayed as my statistician for football and Providence College basketball for many years," Clark said.

After a Harvard education, he became personal statistician for ABC-TV sportscasters Keith Jackson and Chris Schenkel. Jackson and Jerry's father were influential in his decision to mainly Atlanta," said Matthews. "I wanted to stay in the National League. I didn't want to go over to the other league and have to learn the pitchers all over again."

Neither Turner nor Matthews would disclose details of the contract, but it was believed to be for about $1 million over five years.

McKeon, who got the expansion Kansas City Royals started on the road to an American league playoff berth and will be 46 Tuesday, becomes the 12th manager for Finley — not counting two who made return appearances — since he purchased the Kansas City A's franchise from Arnold Johnson in 1961.

The managerial announcement came two plays after the piece-by-piece dismantling of the three-time world champion A's began. As part of the re-entry draft, the A's lost three members of the squad that took consecutive World Series titles from 1972-74 — catcher-first baseman Gene Tenace (San Diego), outfielder Joe Rudi (California) and shortstop Bert Campaneris (Texas). In addition, outfielder Don Baylor, who came to the A's last spring as part of the trade for Reggie Jackson, signed with the California Angels.

Only last week, Finley completed one of the most bizarre transactions in baseball history by trading his last manager, Chuck Tanner, to the Pittsburgh Pirates for catcher Manny Sanguillen and an estimated $100,000.

Steinbrenner has charged the California Angels with bending the free-agent rules by not signing three minor league players.

The Angels lost three free agents from their roster and, by the rules, are allowed to sign three free agents. Clubs losing two or fewer free agents are limited to signing two-like the Yankees, who lost pitcher Doyle Alexander but Thursday announced the signing of lefthander Don Gullett.

So far, they have signed star outfielders Joe Rudi and Don Baylor from the free-agent lists and still have their sights on another blue-chipper.

Gullett to Yanks; A's ink McKeon

Hurler 'least likely'

Cincinnati (UPI) — While certain gregarious, ambitious ballplayers could be counted on to dive head first into baseball's new "free agent" swim, shy Don Gullett had seemed one of the least likely candidates in all of baseball.

He just wasn't the wave-making type. "He asks no special favors, and he could if he wanted to," batter-mate Johnny Bench raved of Gullett a year ago.

"He is the greatest individual I ever met," Cincinnati Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson enthused of Gullett a year back. "Despite his success, he has never changed for one minute of his life."

Obviously, Gullett changed for at least a minute Thursday — that moment when he decided to jump the Reds for a $2 million, six-year contract with the New York Yankees.

Although the contract speaks for itself in explaining why a person would make such a decision, the reason Gullett originally charged such a course remains somewhat of a mystery.

Making big headlines off the field and spurring strong reaction — which is happening to Gullett whether he wants it or not — always seemed to run against the basic grain of his personality.

It is easy to believe that Donald Edward Gullett is a country boy from Lynn, Ky. He enjoys the privacy of his home life with his wife and two children and remains an unassuming 25-year-old, seeming to refute the glittering lifestyle that a seven-year major league career could bring.

Don Gullett

reached a deal last night for at least the next five years, hopefully for the rest of his career."

The 26-year-old Matthews, playing out his option with the San Francisco Giants, batted .279 last season while hitting 20 home runs and driving in 84 runs.

Matthews, who had a .287 average in five seasons with the giants, said he turned down offers of more money to sign with Atlanta, "because I felt the Braves made the fairest offer."

"We talked with just about everybody, including San Diego and the New York Mets, but

Lincoln hunter gets 8-pointer

Huskers put bowl worries behind them with team vote

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

The Nebraska football team and coaching staff won't be worrying about a bowl bid any more.

The Huskers voted Wednesday night to attend another bowl if the possibility of playing in the Orange Bowl disappears this Saturday with an Iowa State win over Oklahoma State, or if NU fails to control Oklahoma Nov. 26.

"The team voted 90-95 percent yes to accept a bowl bid and I see that as very encouraging," said Osborne. "Last year the first vote we took was evenly split about going to another bowl besides the Orange Bowl. But after we lost to Oklahoma we reconsidered and decided to accept the Fiesta Bowl bid."

"The bowl people wanted to know if we were interested in accepting another bowl, so we voted Wednesday night to let them know," said Osborne. "Even the few people that voted not to accept seemed to be very sympathetic to going to another bowl and that'll help because you can't play anybody with 50 per cent of a team."

The Huskers worked out for about 20 minutes less than usual Thursday because "after conditioning two hours a day for 10 days, you could start dragging," said Osborne.

Already the NU squad has had more outside practices this week in preparation for Oklahoma. "Last year, we had one day in four that was good enough to practice outside," said Osborne. "Last year we lost our perspective trying to defend the option and it hurts your passing preparation."

In discussing the defensive game against the Sooners, Osborne said his team will be facing a similar threat to last year's Oklahoma team in that current quarterback Tom Lott is as talented as last year's quarterback Steve Davis.

"It's hard to take everything away from them," said Osborne. "We can't stop all of their wishbone attack but we can hope to contain their backfield."

"Steve Davis had three great games against us — maybe his best games ever — the last three years, but we also had to worry about hallway Joe Washington. This year there's Lott, Horace Ivory and fullback Kenny King," said Osborne.

"We've had one slot against the wishbone this year, against Kansas. But we shut KU out a year ago and then Oklahoma scored 35 points against us," Osborne added. "Oklahoma has much better personnel than Kansas this year so the defending will have to be different than against the Jayhawks."

Referring to the rumor that his job was in jeopardy and to the criticisms of this year's NU team Osborne said they were "bothersome."

"We're trying to concentrate on Oklahoma but these things are bothersome," he said. "We're 7-2-1 and I guess that's bad. Sometimes I'm tempted to believe that stuff but it may be just a surface reaction and not an indication of how things really are."

"It has gotten so that there is very little margin of error in this job," said Osborne. "This (the Big Eight) is probably the most competitive league in the country. Of the eight teams, seven are very good and the top five could play with anybody any day. If you took the top ranked teams in the Big Eight, you might not find a record better than 8-2 or 7-3, but you still have some of the best teams in the nation."

"This isn't sour grapes, but you don't see anybody too anxious to play a Big Eight team in a bowl game," Osborne said. "Jerry Claiborne (coach of unbeaten Maryland) and Johnny Majors (coach of unbeaten and top-ranked Pittsburgh) both coached in the Big Eight and they don't seem to be too anxious to play a Big Eight team. I'm not saying they're ducking the meeting but they also know the kind of football we play here."

Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney soundly denied a report in "Score," a football forecasting letter, that said Wyoming coach Fred Akers would be offered the Nebraska head coaching job should the Huskers lose to Oklahoma.

"There was not a shred of truth to it. I'd like to find out where it comes from. I'm thinking about filing a suit over it," said Devaney. "Tom is the finest coach in the country. I sincerely mean that with all my heart."

"I haven't talked to Akers since a banquet last winter and he wasn't in a position to go anywhere then," Devaney said, adding that he also had not talked to anyone from the Boston publication.

The Huskers will scrimmage Friday and practice Saturday and then take Sunday off before the final week of preparation for the OU game.

Lincoln southpaw Monte Steenson shows the form which has enabled him to emerge as one of the top bowlers in town during the 1976 season.

Southpaw sets the pace in Lincoln bowling circles

By Bob Moyer
Staff sports writer

When the American Bowling Congress revised its rule on dressing lanes this past year to eliminate tapering, there was great uncertainty as to what effect it would have on local bowlers.

Now, with most leagues moving into the second round of action in fall play, a couple of generalizations seem to be safe to make.

First, the new rule has cut down on the number of big scores by men bowlers and secondly, for the majority of league bowlers, the rule has made no difference at all.

At a comparable time last year, the 10th best men's single game score in Lincoln was 285. This year, the best single game effort has been a 288 by Monte Steenson. It is also the only score shot over 285 so far this season.

Likewise, the top men's series this year is 758, also by Steenson. Last year, by this time, the 10th best series by a man in town was 737. Besides Steenson's 758, only Max Jensen has shot over 737, with a 738.

However, women's scoring seems to be largely unaffected. At this time last year, the high women's series was 657 by Terry Bargman, this year it's 653 by Phyllis Brierly. Last year the high women's game was 258 by Laurie Kessner, this year it's 256 by Marge Boon. Last year, the 10th best women's game was 245, this year it's also 245.

Among series for women, the girls are actually doing better this year, than last. At this time last season, the 10th best women's set was 601, this season it's 610.

Among the men this year, two bowlers have clearly stood out as far as big scores are concerned, Monte Steenson and Rodger Florum.

Florum has three of the top 10 series bowled so far, shooting 728 and 709 at Hollywood and 711 at Parkway.

Steenson has been even more impressive. Not only does he have the high game and series, but, has two of the top 10 series and three of top 10 games.

For his part, Steenson credits his attitude for much of his good showing.

"I think it helped me a lot not bowling this summer," says Monte, who played AAA softball for Dick Flynn Buick.

"Everybody was talking about how tough the lanes were going to be. A lot of people thought they weren't going to bowl well. I started looking forward to this fall, thinking it would be nice if I could bowl well while others weren't," said Steenson.

A left-handed kegler, Steenson, naturally enough, does not buy the old story about southpaws having an advantage.

"It's all lane conditions," he said. "Sure, there are times when lefties have an advantage but there are also times when they are at a distinct disadvantage, so I don't see how you can say left-handers get all the breaks.

"Actually I don't even think of myself as a left-handed bowler," added Steenson. "I look at myself as a right-hander bowling with the wrong hand."

Although he is just 22, Steenson has been bowling for 17 years.

"I think it helped me growing up in the game without another left-hander around," says Monte. "I think I learned the fundamentals of the game better."

Locally, Steenson's only real goal is to shoot a 300 game. It bothers him that he has had several chances, but failed to come through. "I guess I just can't bowl too well with both hands around my neck," Monte laughs. "I'd also like to shoot 800, but I've had a couple of chances already and didn't make it. You don't get that many chances at 800."

Steenson's main goal in bowling now, however, is becoming a pro. The problem for him, however, is money.

"I'd really like to bowl in some of these regional tournaments, like the one that was just at Hollywood Bowl," he says. "But I just can't afford it on my own. It would really be great if I could get some backing."

Here is a look at the top games and series bowled so far in Lincoln this year:

A bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of Lance Rentzel, former wide receiver for the Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rams, for his failure to appear in the superior court in connection with a 1973 marijuana conviction. The 32-year-old Rentzel, a nine-year veteran who was released by the Rams last season, failed to show up for a progress report on his probation status stemming from the conviction.

Lake Placid official blasts environmentalists' claims

Albany, N.Y. (AP) — Supporters of the Lake Placid plan to host the 1980 Winter Olympics ridiculed Thursday claims that the Games threaten to destroy the Adirondack region.

"It is important that the public be aware of the total commitment . . . to the preservation of environmental values in the Lake Placid Valley of the Adirondacks," said J. Vernon Lamb Jr., chairman of the Lake Placid Olympic group's environmental committee.

Lamb, a local lumber dealer, spoke at the second hearing in one week on the draft environmental impact statement covering the Games. He and other witnesses blasted the Sierra Club for "unfounded, distorted and incorrect" claims about the potential impact of the Games.

"To be uninformed in this Olympic matter has been the choice of the Sierra Club," said Lamb, adding that the San Francisco-based group refused to participate in the planning process.

Other environmental groups—some who still express reservations about some of the Olympic plans—have accepted Lamb's invitation to sit as advisers to his committee. The Sierra Club has not, but last week a club spokesman charged that the Olympic plans could bring on

"rows and rows of new motels and shops lit by neon sign after neon sign."

Lamb said the Sierra Club apparently ignored various laws and regulations already in effect which prohibit such development.

Argentina to host World Cup soccer games despite violence

Rome (UPI) — Brazil's Joao Havelange, president of the International Football Federation (FIFA), said Thursday his organization still plans to hold the 1978 World Cup in Argentina despite political violence in that country.

He said he and other FIFA officials would discuss security problems in a meeting in Buenos Aires later this month with Argentinian President Lt. Gen. Jorge R. Videla.

Havelange, on a two-day visit to the Italian Soccer Federation during which he saw Italy defeat England 2-0 a World Cup qualifying match Wednesday, told a news conference "the World Cup is going to be held in Argentina."

"FIFA has an obligation to respect established governments," Havelange said, "and there (in Argentina) we have a government recognized by all countries in the world."

As for violence, Havelange said, "it is difficult to see what country in the world has no such situations. Bombs have exploded in London, not to mention Belfast."

Havelange said numerous progress reports over the past few years by FIFA fact-finding missions showed preparations for the World Cup were progressing "correctly and perfectly." He said the West German chairman of the fact-finding group said preparations were more advanced than they were when the World Cup was held in Germany.

Havelange said FIFA officials and the Cup's organizing committee would meet in Buenos Aires Nov. 29-30 and planned to see President Videla.

'The Game' for '76

United Press International

Each season the pundits allow for one "college football game of the year" and this time around they're leaning toward Saturday's UCLA-Southern California clash as 1976's ultra game.

UCLA and Southern Cal are ranked second and third, respectively, in the national ratings. The winner in this encounter receives two quick acknowledgments — Pac-8 Conference Champion and Rose Bowl representation.

A third and bigger prize is in the offing for the winner — a possible national championship which will be decided after the New Year's Bowl games.

The Uclans are unbeaten, with one tie, in 10 games this year. USC is 8-1. Both have 6-0 league records. UCLA coach Terry Donahue naturally supports the feeling that this game has turned out to be the year's outstanding attraction.

"In my view, this will be the best football game in the country so far this season," says Donahue. "The one that wins can be truly called a great team — perhaps the best in the United States."

"When the game is over, people will sit down and analyze the big plays . . ."

The offensive guns for this game are USC's Ricky Bell and the Bruins' Theotis Brown.

Outdoor report

PANHANDLE — Don Hunt, conservation officer from Oshkosh, reports some 2,000 geese and an estimated 85,000 mallards on the Garden County Refuge. Jim McCole, the officer from Gering says there are at least 300 geese and thousands of ducks on the refuge at Lake Minatare. At Clear Creek Public hunting area near Lake McConaughy, hunters were bagging some geese and a few ducks. Near Alliance, officers reported that most of the small flocks were frozen and most hunting activity centered around rivers in the area.

SANDHILLS — Elvin Zimmerman, officer from Valentine, reported that there were a lot of ducks in Cherry County prior to the cold snap last weekend, and hunters were bagging some. Fishermen were taking perch in Merritt Reservoir near Valentine and were having good success.

SOUTHWEST — Officers reported good success for deer in the McCook area and said there was a greater percentage of trophy animals than in past years. Red Willow Reservoir had 2,500 ducks, mostly mallards, and a few great blue herons. Clear Creek Reservoir was holding 3,000 ducks and some geese, while Swanton Reservoir had 1,500 ducks and 300 geese, and Ender had 4,500 ducks and 350 geese. Hunting success early in the week was reported to be poor in all of these areas due to the warm weather.

NORTHEAST — John Schuckman, conservation officer from Crofton, reported 50,000 ducks, mostly mallards, on Lewis and Clark Lake. Hunters there were having some success along the river in the morning and in cornfields south of the lake near sunset, and game hunters were having fair success on pheasant and quail north of St. Paul, and waterfowl were reported to be moving through the area.

SOUTHEAST — Officers reported pheasant and quail hunters were having good success due to dry corn in most areas of the southeast. Quite a few ducks were using the Salt Valley lakes, primarily Branched Oak, and hunters were taking some birds.

Cool head main thing

San Francisco — We've been plagued by a series of breakdowns. "I don't know how it happened. It just fell off my bike."

"Don't slam the door! The hinge is loose!" (Slam!)

Someday leaned on a small alarm clock I just had fixed. Now the cover won't close.

But as they say in Hawaii's pidgin: "Cool head, main t'ing."

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

A small slider in a bureau broke last night. Just chipped enough that the top drawer wouldn't close.

I called the furniture people. At 9 this morning they brought a brand new bureau. Took away the old one.

I rent my furniture. This is my third rented condominium in two years. The last two were sold out from under me.

They warned me that could happen. On such a dicey proposition — (here today, gone tomorrow) — I could see that moving costs would eat me up.

I rented furniture for the whole scatter. Front room. Bedrooms. When I move, the rental company moves me. Free.

We are loose and easy. If I don't like it, all I have to do is put on my hat and walk out.

Love is a sticky proposition for the sticky porcupine. The porcupine can only become pregnant one day of the year. And only two hours of that dramatic day.

The day occurs only this month. November. Now is the season of porcupine love. (Let's hear it for the porcupine!)

Two hours of one day of the year! A tight schedule. And, considering all those sharp quills, requiring considerable caution.

However, little porcupines are born each year. The porcupine is not considered an endangered species.

With rented furniture, I am allowed to change everything every six months. New couch. New chairs. New lamps. New beds, bureaus and dining room table.

I get somebody to do this while I'm on a long trip. Neighbor chicks. Secretary. Moppets.

I said: "Don't ask me what I want. Surprise me."

Once I came home and found the scatter furnished like a scene from "The Passion of the Pasha."

The lights were low and seductive. The couch was so overstuffed I sat in it and sank right to the floor. Only my head stuck out. All I needed was a turban, gold slippers with curled up toes and a bubbly water pipe.

These changes affect your personality. Keep life lively.

At present we are in austerity. The couch and chairs are hard. They are covered in plaid — Bunting Stewart, I think. The lamps are modern tubes of steel.

The coffee table is a sturdy piece of oak. Fit for banging pewter tankards on. Furnishings for drinking songs and bones flung to dogs.

Alcoholism, drug council is covered

Malpractice coverage for Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs staffers and board members apparently will fall short of the pulpit.

The question arose Thursday when board members were informed that LCAD now has malpractice insurance and that board members are protected.

The question, albeit in fun: Would the Rev. Ebb Munden, a board member, be protected from malpractice when he takes to his pulpit at First United Methodist Church?

The answer: No, the coverage stops at the pulpit steps.

But Munden and other board members, as well as LCAD employees, now are covered should lawsuits be brought against them for advice given concerning alcohol or drug abuse.

The malpractice coverage will cost the agency $535 per year.

Increasingly, persons who affect our psychological and mental selves are being slapped with malpractice suits, Bob Adams, LCAD director said, explaining the new coverage.

Workers irate; company wants five-day week

Sutherland (AP) — An estimated 150 to 200 workers failed to appear for work Thursday at the construction site of the Gerald Gentleman Power Station near Sutherland.

About 1,200 workers, all non-union, are employed at the plant site.

A spokesman said the men were protesting the addition of one day to their work week.

The men usually work 10 hours a day, four days a week, but the employers increased the number of days by one and lowered the number of hours.

Robert Butler of Dallas, Tex., representing the contractor, National Industrial Corp., of Dallas, told the workers that the change of hours was due to less daylight hours for working.

Doug Teavey, one of the organizers, said nothing "was really accomplished" Thursday except to let the contractors know where they stood.

Astrological Forecast by Sidney Omarr

Friday, November 19, 1976

More persons born under Gemini talk about their sign than any others that I know - the Gemini native provides an in-depth analysis of his sign. In effect, "So there!" Scorpio persons are more secretive. Pisces individuals take quiet pride in their sign while Taurus gives us an assessment and quickly leaves the subject. Leo says simply, "I am a Leo!" That apparently suffices, tells the whole story. You can see that I am a Virgo, says Virgo. And so it goes - people have explanations for their zodiacal signs. But Gemini can delude, analyze, make excuses and seriously plead a case based on. "After all, I do have a dual nature - I am a Gemini!"

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on unusual literature. The occult, money in connection with partner, melle. You gain wider recognition, opportunity for better display, distribution. Another Aries - and a Libra - figure in scenario. Your emotions are involved - there is no half-way. If involved, it will be "for real!"

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on agreement, legal verification, special projects. Marriage, partnership, public relations are featured. You get chance for new start - member of opposite sex finds you attractive and makes no secret of it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Low key approach indicated, but aura of excitement is present. Steam builds - one who works with you expresses controversial opinion. Be attentive without getting inextricably involved. Be your own person - and that will be sufficient, more than enough.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good moon aspect coincides now with change, variety, physical contact, aliveness, personality. dealings with opposite sex and children. Air of celebration exists. Popularity increases. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What seems solid, set may actually be flexible. Know and don't be afraid to ask questions. Give full play to curiosity, especially where home taxes, land values are concerned. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on messages, short trips, a call which involves you with mail and a relative. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are in picture. Sense of humor is your ally. Express yourself - get thoughts, problems on paper. A significant change occurs and you are the beneficiary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on costs, values, personal possessions, domestic agreements and adjustments. Key now is diplomacy. You can win your way. Attempted force proves costly and misses the mark. Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Money comes your way if you are ready for it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cycle high here is a figurative drum roll in your behalf. The buildup is on - you receive benefit of any doubt. Enjoy without believing your own publicity. Refine techniques, methods and define terms. Be aware of semantics. Pisces, Virgo persons are part of your personal scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What was hidden becomes visible. You are able to deal with issues and get support from those in positions of authority. A business meeting could be high on agenda. Your views are sought - give them and be confident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on fulfillment, popularity, friend who confides problem. Be sympathetic but insist others do something to help themselves. Aries, Libra individuals could be involved. You are able to add successfully, complex projects. Hobby provides creative outlet, pleasure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight on goal, ability to communicate with one who can aid you in obtaining needed material. Stress independence, confidence. Another Aquarian - and a Leo - figure prominently. A promotion may be upcoming.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Philosophical concepts become more clearly outlined, defined. You obtain better answer to why you are here - and where you might be going. One who aided, taught in past could come back into your life. Long-distance call, travel plans are highlighted.

IF NOVEMBER 19th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, creative, forceful, dedicated, stubborn and you have been one of your most significant of the past nine years for you. You are "in business" in love, handling more pressure responsibility. You are due for added recognition and greater financial, emotional security. Those "abrupt changes" have been good for you! Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to tell you your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 5 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 5, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
